What constitutes the local in a global age has long been a concern of social scientists. These edited collections bring together anthropologists writing about economic and social changes occurring in locations scattered across several continents. The stated purpose of Plural Globalities is to identify "when global processes articulate with local specificities" because "they give rise to particular responses and outcomes." More specifically, contributors "describe how a number of local communities have behaved differently under conditions of globalization. . . . We find that globalization has had a range of outcomes for individuals and communities" (p. 2). This is a traditional understanding of the global-local connection, where "outside" forces enter places and influence residents and their activities. For the authors, some destabilization of the hegemony of the world system is accepted: "Globalization is not monolithic, economically or culturally. It is a sometimes chaotic and contradictory array of processes, perceptions, consumption patterns, politics, worldviews, production strategies (combinations of post-Fordist and Fordist strategies still exist side-by-side, after all) and so on." Consequently, "the global and the local are highly variable and problematic categories that are not self-evident. . . . It isn't as simple as a dichotomy between general and specific, center and periphery, general and unique" (p. 14).

Contributors vary in terms of how thoroughly they reject the assumptions of world system theories, however. O'Neill, studying Nepalese carpet makers, notes that, as in other societies, industries producing these crafts are neither survivals of natural economies nor cases of peasant "petty commodity production." . . . Western entrepreneurs are not alone in defining those new products and markets; in some cases, local risk-takers see the potential in the resources around them and are inspired to transform them into new livelihoods. (P. 149)

Plural Globalities In Multiple Localities:

Plural Globalities in Multiple Localities Martha W. Rees, Josephine Smart, 2001-04-25 Plural Globalities in Multiple Localities New World Borders brings together various papers from the Society for Economic Anthropology's 1997 annual meeting. Structured around the theme Globalization and Regionalization, the meeting investigated the way this phenomenon has influenced the restructuring and reconfiguration of businesses, states, cities, and social life since the 1980s. The Society for Economic Anthropology brought a local or micro perspective to the study of globalization that has been dominated by macro approaches. The papers from this volume present the multiplicity of globalities that we face today and examine the contributions anthropology has to offer to this field of study.

Displacing Desire Beth E. Notar, 2006-10-31 Why do millions of people from around the world flock to Dali, a small borderland town in the Himalayan foothills of southwest China? Lonely planet, trekkers, American, European, and Israeli backpackers named for the guidebook they carry, trek halfway across the globe to get off the beaten track, yet converge here to drink coffee, eat banana pancakes, and share music from home. Coastal Chinese who are prospering in the phenomenal economic growth of China's reform era travel thousands of miles to sing songs and dress up as their favorite characters from a revolutionary era movie musical. Overseas Chinese from Southeast Asia, as well as a new generation of mainland youth, follow in the footsteps of heroes and villains from Hong Kong martial arts novels, seeking an experience of a Buddhist wild, wild West at a martial arts theme park dubbed Hollywood East or Daliwood. Inspired by representations in popular culture that engender fantasies of the exotic, these tourists, Western and Chinese, journey to Dali, Yunnan, in search of an imagined place where they can indulge their craving for authenticity, display their status in the present, and act out their nostalgia for the past. Based on more than a decade of ethnographic research, Beth Notar explores struggles over place as people in Dali attempt to represent their historical identity and define their future. Displacing Desire takes representation into the realm of practice to consider the ways in which those who are represented must contend with their image in popular culture and the material after-effects of representations, even decades after their original production. It contributes to an exploration of travel as performance of nostalgia, fantasy, and status. More specifically, it contributes to an understanding of the growth of consumer culture in China, examining what China's modernization process and market economy mean for different social actors in their struggles over power and place.
