Liberal Peacebuilding and Global Governance David Roberts, 2011-03 This book examines the limits to cosmopolitan liberal peacebuilding caused by its preoccupation with the values and assumptions of neoliberal global governance The peace people experience is determined by the processes privileged in peacebuilding This book is about four things that shape the processes involved First it is a critique of orthodox postconflict peacebuilding It takes the position that the present approach although seemingly hegemonic is routinely ignored or manipulated by elites and society and converted into a miasma that to some degree wastes the energies and opportunities involved Second it is about alternatives which invoke the kind of peace people might seek in postconflict places if they had more control over the process of peacebuilding a notion referred to here as popular peace It is thus not the kind of critical work that some describe as reflexive anti liberalism Rather it seeks alternatives that are grounded in the lives of people in postconflict spaces and which also reflect some of the essential values of Liberalism Third it is about the role of both informal and formal actors institutions and practices in the creation of such a peace For instance it is concerned with the legitimacy of informal practices that lie beyond Liberal tolerance and which are vital in the pursuit of everyday peace Fourth it is about a transversal rather than vertical or hierarchical relationship of global and local governance in securing a peace that reflects the needs and values of both In short this work is a response to the substantial inconsistencies that appear between peacebuilding rhetoric and everyday outcomes in postconflict places This book will be of much interest to students of peacebuilding post conflict statebuilding conflict studies global governance and International Relations in general Department of Defense Authorization for Appropriations for Fiscal Year 1991 United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Armed Services, 1991 Exploding the Myth? Derek Braddon, 2014-02-25 From a cold war peak of some 1000 billion per annum world military expenditure has declined by about 40% since 1990 reaching its lowest level for thirty years With such significant decline in global public expenditure commitments to the defence sector a substantial and lasting peace dividend was anticipated Most governments believed that market forces left more or less to their own devices would deal effectively with this major exogenous shock and generate sufficient new economic activity to allow increased public expenditure on health education and welfare The approach of this book is to challenge the fundamental but flawed belief that a substantial and lasting peace dividend could be secured through market solution alone The principal assertion is that market adjustment by itself cannot deliver such a dividend The book focuses on the major aspects of the economic business and security consequences of post Cold War defence expenditure reduction Key problems obstructing optimal market response are identified and possible remedial action by government and others is considered

Towards a Northeast Asian Security Community Bernhard Seliger, Werner Pascha, 2011-06-25 The Northeast Asian security environment is closely linked to Korea's growth perspectives for the future The spectacular rise of the South Korean economy in the past half century also known as Miracle on the Han River has been duly highlighted as one of the most successful cases of economic development worldwide However among the factors curbing South Korea's growth perspectives has been from the very beginning of its rise the coexistence of the difficult neighbour to the North Democratic People's Republic of Korea While in the cold war this coexistence has been taken as inevitable after the end of the cold war there were hopes to overcome this obstacle to further growth either through collapse or enhanced cooperation with the North neither of which became reality North Korea's unprecedented aggressiveness and development of long range ballistic missiles and nuclear devices made this threat truly an international question with multilateral talks coming into existence as ad hoc measures to cope with the nuclear crisis It was then that the idea of a Northeast Asian Security Community was born The contributions in this book discuss how a peaceful solution of the security problems could not only enhance stability of Korea's economy and reduce the defense burden considerably the so called peace dividend but would facilitate regional investments safer and regional solutions for common economic problems When discussing the possibilities of a security framework or in an institutionalized form security community in Northeast Asia the authors in this volume are realistic as to not fall into the trap of wishful thinking which so often has characterized approaches to North Korea resulting in disappointment The past two years again saw the rising of tensions in Northeast Asia and the masterful way in which even an impoverished and isolated country can play its cards While it seems a new ice age between the two Koreas is possible nevertheless and maybe even more than ever the search for a stable security framework for Northeast Asia as a precondition for peaceful economic cooperation and development will go on The chapters in this volume contribute to the ongoing debate to secure peace and development in Northeast Asia making this book of interest to both academics and policy makers alike The Peace

Dividend Loayza, 2013 Chief Executive, 1990 The Peace Dividend Delano Villanueva, Mr. Malcolm D.

Knight, Norman Loayza, 1995-05-01 Although conventional wisdom suggests that reducing military spending may improve a country's economic growth performance empirical studies have produced ambiguous results This paper extends a standard growth model and estimates it using techniques that exploit both cross section and time series dimensions of available data to obtain consistent estimates of the growth retarding effects of military spending via its adverse impact on capital formation and resource allocation Model simulations suggest that a substantial long run Peace Dividend in the form of higher capacity output may result from i markedly lower military expenditure levels achieved in most regions during the late 1980s and ii further military spending cuts that would be possible in the future if a global peace could be secured

Economics Edwin G. Dolan, David Earl Lindsey, 1991 Nuclear Times, 1990 Conversion Survey, 1998 Nixon's Economy Allen J. Matusow, 1998 Historian Allen J Matusow now presents the first comprehensive history of Nixon's political economy He depicts a president who disliked the subject but was forced to pay attention or lose his dream of effecting a historic realignment of the political parties in America The study derives its authority from extensive archival research in Nixon's presidential papers including notes by Haldeman and Ehrlichman of crucial conversations in the Oval Office Matusow shows the poverty of contemporary economic theory Nixon's willingness to sacrifice the world economy for his domestic political purposes and his desperate attempts to find something anything that might work Lurching from one set of policies to another Matusow argues Nixon achieved only illusory successes that ultimately brought on a decade of economic disaster

World Economic and Social Survey, 1995 The Peace Dividend N.P. Gleditsch, O. Bjerkholt, A. Cappelen, R. Smith, J.P. Dunne, 1996-08-20 These papers demonstrate how different kinds of analytical approach can be used to anticipate the economic repercussions of systematic reduction of military spending It is of interest to economists scholars in peace studies and international relations and government officials dealing with disarmament issues and economic restructuring

Costs of Disarmament Susan Willett, 2003 This is the third in a series of books that look at the costs and benefits of arms control and disarmament It looks at what happens when there are no controls i.e. the costs of an arms race by examining the case of India and Pakistan It concludes that the high levels of military expenditure have led to increasing tension and insecurity whilst the costs of the programmes have retarded the pace of development Pakistan in particular has many of the characteristics of a failing state The book concludes with some suggestions as to how India and Pakistan could break out of their destructive cycle

The Economy Today Bradley R. Schiller, 1996 This undergraduate economics text combines theoretical principles with real world events and uses examples from journals and newspapers to complement its real world focus The text is developed around the central theme of government versus market reliance and integrates coverage of the Keynesian framework model into the AS AD framework There are chapters on short run determinants and many long run possibilities for productivity and growth Numerous examples from the Cuban economy are used to highlight the problems of communism and to outline a pending transition

The Peace Dividend: Military Spending Cuts and Economic Growth Norman Loayza, 1999 February 1996 Empirical results suggest that lower military spending in the late 1980s plus further cuts in military spending should global peace be secured could produce a substantial long term peace dividend in higher capacity output Conventional wisdom suggests that reducing military spending may improve a country's economic growth but empirical studies have produced ambiguous results on this point Extending a standard growth model Knight Loayza and

Villanueva exploit both cross section and time series dimensions of available data to get consistent estimates of the growth retarding effects of military spending Military spending is growth retarding because of its adverse impact on capital formation and resource allocation Model simulation results suggest a substantial long term peace dividend in the form of higher capacity output per capita that may result from 1 markedly lower military spending in most regions in the late 1980s and 2 future cuts in military spending if global peace is secured This paper a joint product of the Macroeconomics and Growth Division Policy Research Department and the International Monetary Fund is part of a larger effort to understand the link between policies and growth The Presidency of Lyndon B. Johnson Vaughn Davis Bornet,1983 Presents an assessment of the Johnson administration including the Vietnam issue Naval War College Review ,1993 Naval War College Review Naval War College (U.S.),1993
