technology are implicated in each other Contrary to commonsense understandings of both religion as an otherworldly orientation and technology as the name for tools techniques and expert knowledges oriented to this world the contributors to this volume challenge the grounds on which this division has been erected in the first place What sorts of things come to light when one allows religion and technology to mingle freely In an effort to answer that question Deus in Machina embarks upon an interdisciplinary voyage across diverse traditions and contexts where religion and technology meet from the design of clocks in medieval Christian Europe to the healing power of prayer in premodern Buddhist Japan to 19th century Spiritualist devices for communicating with the dead to Islamic debates about kidney dialysis in contemporary Egypt to the work of disability activists using documentary film to reimagine Jewish kinship to the representation of Haitian Vodou on the Internet among other case studies Combining rich historical and ethnographic detail with extended theoretical reflection Deus in Machina outlines new directions for the study of religion and as technology that will resonate across the human sciences including religious studies science and technology studies communication studies history anthropology and philosophy
