

The cover of the 'Science Encyclopedia' is a vibrant collage of scientific concepts. At the top, a diagram of a DNA double helix is on the left, a satellite orbits a planet in the center, and a globe of Earth is on the right. Below the title, a list of topics is centered. The central focus is a large, colorful molecular model with red and yellow spheres. Surrounding this are various other elements: a portrait of a man (likely a scientist) on the left, a circuit board on the bottom left, a bundle of colorful fibers (like an optical fiber) at the bottom center, a classical bust on the right, and a cross-section of a brick wall at the bottom right. Several blue spheres are scattered throughout the design.
