

Payment by Capitation

- The organization/provider receives a fixed sum of money per period for each individual (enrolled) under its care
 - Fee is for all “covered services” required by persons under care in the period
 - The fee per person per period is pre-determined
 - Total payment depends on the number of persons on the “roster” (enrolled with the provider/organization) regardless of their utilization or number of visits/services needed
 - It is for funding or remuneration
 - Mostly prospective payment
- The capitation payment is usually risk-adjusted to reflect the differing needs of individuals (age and sex risk classes are common factors)
- It creates incentive to under-provide care (called “skimping”) and to engage in risk selection to attract relatively low-risk, healthy individuals within each risk class
