Peasants Against the State Stephen G. Bunker, 1987 Stephen Bunker challenges the image of peasants as passive victims and argues that coffee growers in the Bugisu District of Uganda because they own land and may choose which crops to produce maintain an unusual degree of economic and political independence Focusing on peasant struggles for market control over coffee exports in Bugisu from colonial times through the reign and overthrow of Idi Amin Bunker shows that these freeholding peasants acted collectively and used the state s dependence on coffee export revenues to effectively influence and veto government programs inimical to their interests Bunker s work vividly portrays the small victories and great trials of ordinary people struggling to control their own economic destiny while resisting the power of the world economy Peasant Protests and Uprisings in Tokugawa Japan Stephen Vlastos,1986 The Japanese peasant has been thought of as an obedient and passive subject of the feudal ruling class Yet Tokugawa villagers frequently engaged in unlawful and disruptive protests Moreover the frequency and intensity of the peasants collective action increased markedly at the end of the Tokugawa period Stephen Vlastos s examination of the changing patterns of peasant protest in the Fukushima area shows that peasant mobilization was restricted both ideologically and organizationally and that peasants did not become a prime moving force in the Meiji Restoration Congressional Record ,1894 Peasant Studies ,1989
