Drawing on debates from traditional and postmodern thoughts on science and technology the title builds a new theoretical framework to reconsider science and technology integrating the opposing viewpoints that either justify science or negate it. As the third volume of a three volume set that proposes to reconsider science and technology and explores how the philosophy of science and technology responds to an ever changing world this final volume seeks to restore the cultural implications of science. Across the six chapters the authors probe the prospect of a pluralistic scientific culture including discussions of diversified value choices the tension between reason and unreason other binary characteristics of scientific knowledge including objectivity and uniqueness universality and locality as well as the loss awakening and reconstruction of scientific culture. The authors call for a transformation of scientific culture from a dominant culture to an affirmative one and envision a free and open world of science and technology. The volume will appeal to scholars and students interested in the philosophy of science and technology the ideology of scientism and anti scientism modernism and postmodernism Marxist philosophy and topics related to scientific culture.

W. F. Tomlin, 2019-03-06

Originally published in 1947 This book looks at contemporary conundrums in philosophical tendencies bringing the reader a first principles review of the purpose of such enquiries in relation to modern life. It presents the importance of the history of the development of philosophical thought beginning in Part 1 with perception. Significant definitions and theories are identified and later refinements discussed in particular conceptualism and its development from the Greeks through Berkeley to modern realism and its limitations and critiques. Part 2 brings problems identified by past thinkers to the fore from Plato's forms to Christian theology in an examination of the apparent dichotomy between metaphysics and scientific methods. Part 3 examines the Rationalist and the Empiricist attacks on Scepticism and Kant's reconciliation of the differences of both. This provides the context and structure for discussion of the works of Hegel and ultimate refutation thereof as a confusion between metaphysics and theology. Part 4 identifies the developments in thinking of Positivism both Modern and Logical and the New Synthesis of Alexander and Whitehead as the most recent approach. The Western, 1877.
