Bellamy, Paul Williams, 2014-01-02 Peacekeeping in Global Politics investigates the changing role of peacekeeping and competing perspectives about what that role should be It begins by addressing broad issues connected with the transition from a Westphalian to post Westphalian international society the ethical and legal dilemmas provoked by armed intervention and the alternative ways of conceptualising the role that peacekeeping plays It goes on to critically chart the development of traditional peacekeeping before outlining how the role of force in peacekeeping operations has changed and the close links between peacekeeping conflict prevention and conflict resolution The final part of the volume focuses specifically on globalization and the effects that this has had on peacekeeping practices In particular it focuses on the changing conflict environment the growing tendency towards subcontracting peacekeeping duties and the development of regional peacekeeping capabilities Overall this volume makes two contributions to the way we think about peacekeeping first it demonstrates that the theory and practice of peacekeeping is embedded in global politics and second it shows that there an on going debate about what peacekeeping is for

Managing World Order Richard Alqaq, 2009-02-28 Since the end of the Cold War United Nations peace operations have become an established and prominent feature of world politics From Liberia to East Timor the UN now carries out extensive governance related functions and is a significant political force in Southern states and societies Here Richard Al Qaq leads us to a radical new understanding of the UN and its role in international politics He uncovers the political and socio economic import of such peace activities for subject societies and raises important questions about the functioning and dynamics of the global political order A critical view of the internal process of programmatic reform within the UN is elaborated by detailed studies of the politics of UN peace operations in three seminal cases of the 1990s in Somalia Rwanda and Angola This book is essential for understanding the new role of the UN especially in Africa and the politics of so called humanitarian intervention and peace building Peace Operations and International Criminal Justice Majbritt Lyck, 2008-07-29 This new volume provides the first thorough examination of the involvement of peace enforcement soldiers in the detention of indicted war criminals The book firstly addresses why peace enforcement missions need to be involved in detaining indicted war criminals This discussion includes an analysis of how the securing of justice and transitional justice is incorporated into the UN s approach to peace building It also explores IFOR s SFOR s and KFOR s activities aimed at detaining indicted war criminals before turning to an analysis of how the detaining of indicted war criminals is incorporated into peace enforcement doctrines mandates and rules of engagement The book then outlines the mechanisms that need to be established in order to enable peace enforcers to effectively arrest war criminals in the areas where they are deployed It concludes with a discussion of the prospects for the involvement of peace enforcement soldiers in the detention of indicted war criminals and of what lessons future peace enforcement missions can learn from the experience of IFOR SFOR and KFOR

Special Issue on Peace Operations and Global Order Alex J. Bellamy, 2004 Protecting Or Policing Civilians? United Nations Peace Operations and Global Order Enforcement Lou Pingeot, 2020 This dissertation argues that policing is one of the constitutive elements of the current global order and that United Nations led peace operations act as transnational points of cross fertilization for the creation and transmission of global policing practices Empirically it investigates the turn to police peacekeeping or policekeeping the increasing role of police in peace operations It argues that the turn to policekeeping represents more than a change in missions composition and the specific tasks that they accomplish it means that the logic of policing seeps into peacekeeping Whereas peacekeeping is a response to a situation of conflict which supposes the need to mediate between various sides policing is a response to a situation of disorder calling for the punishment of lawbreakers Although the turn to policekeeping has generally been met with enthusiasm in both academic and policy circles this dissertation questions this optimistic reading and asks what type of logic is the logic of policing It argues that policing is characterized by a fundamental tension between the public mission to serve and protect and the mandate to enforce not just public order but social order between inclusion and exclusion Although policing may indeed protect some this protection is not extended to those who are deemed to represent a threat to social order UN led peace operations constitute an often overlooked transnational point of cross fertilization for the creation and transmission of global policing practices Deployed under a Security Council mandate and staffed by troops from all over the world peace operations are a meeting point where North North North South South North and South South encounters occur Not only do intervening countries bring their policing experience to countries of intervention but the experience generated by international intervention then travels out Through this circulation of discourses and practices of order enforcement peace operations co constitute international transnational and domestic hierarchies This understanding of how the fabric of world politics is woven builds on the insights of post colonialism and global historical sociology which have developed a view of the international based on co constitution and relationalism In particular the dissertation contributes to uncovering the transnational dynamics that animate the formation and the evolution of the state domestic security apparatus historically in the metropolises and the colonies and today in the Global North and in the Global South The dissertation develops this theoretical argument through the case of the UN stabilization mission in Haiti MINUSTAH 2004 2017 in three empirical chapters The first examines the mission s treatment of poor marginalized urban populations demonstrating how these groups went from being at risk to being the risk thus justifying robust police military raids in these communities The second chapter addresses the mission's response to public demonstrations showing how threats to public order were reinterpreted as threats to stability and thus to international peace and security The last chapter explores how the language of human rights and justice was mobilized to legitimate the reinforcement of the state's penal chain and in particular the prison system Each empirical chapter locates the case of Haiti within the broader field of global policing and demonstrates that what happens in peacekeeping does not stay in peacekeeping

Managing World Order Richard Kareem Al-Qaq, 2009 International Security in a Changing Global Order Canadian Institute of Strategic Studies. Spring Seminar, 1990 These proceedings contain papers on the following topics as they relate to international security the role of the United Nations implications for international financial institutions domestic pressures and the international environment international security in a changing global order Europe and 1992 the China situation and a Hungarian view of Europe present and future It also contains 12 documents relating to international security

Peace Operations in a Changing World Order, 2014 United Nations Peace Operations and the Management of World Order Richard Kareem Alqaq, 2006 Partnership Peace Operations Hideaki Shinoda, 2024-04-09 Partnership is a key concept in contemporary international peace operations There is no universal model of peace operations in contemporary international society Ad hoc arrangements of partnership between the United Nations and various regional organizations are consequences of the complex circumstances of international security The ways in which partnerships are organised differently in different regions reflect each region's distinctive security situation The universal nature of liberal peacebuilding is thus maintained only by ad hoc arrangements All the UN peacekeeping operations in Africa have some partnership linkages with regional or sub regional organizations ranging from the African Union AU and regional mechanisms to the European Union EU What are the conditions and characteristics that enable or lead to partnership peacekeeping in Africa How should we understand lower levels of partnership peacekeeping in other regions By highlighting key characteristics of partnership peacekeeping the book explores these issues and argues that partnership is a reflection of political circumstances The book provides an unexplored but critical perspective to understand the contemporary world for those who study International Relations Security Studies International Organizations and Peace Studies
