What is the molecular regulation of self incompatibility response in bamboo?

- Is the incompatibility response gametophytic like other grass species?
- Are the homologous genes identified in other grasses present here?
- If yes, how are they regulating bamboo's sexual compatibility nature?

B. Blume, W. Vance Baird, Alla I. Yemets, Diego Breviario, 2008-10-23 Essential processes in biology such as cell and nuclear division development intracellular transport and physiological response rely on the perception of environmental and intracellular signals and their transduction to subcellular targets The mechanisms by which these signals are received by cells and transduced towards the proper targets by cytoskeletal components constitute one of the most important and rapidly developing areas in modern plant biology In addition fundamentally important responses of plants to biotic and abiotic factors also involve signalling to and through the cytoskeleton which helps explain the current interest of biotechnology in this field of fundamental research Manipulation of cytoskeletal components the microtubules and microfilaments had until recently not been a priority issue for plant biotechnology However given the fundamental role of the cytoskeleton during plant growth and development the potential for biotechnological applications is immense The NATO Advanced Research Workshop The Plant Cytoskeleton Genomic and Bioinformatic Tools for Biotechnology and Agriculture was held in Yalta Ukraine from September 19 to 23 2006 which continued the tradition of the first two International Symposia Plant Cytoskeleton Molecular Keys for Biotechnology Yalta Ukraine 1998 and The Plant Cytoskeleton functional diversity and biotechnological implications Kiev Ukraine 2002 Plant Breeding M.D. Hayward, N.O. Our requirement for plant breeders to be successful has never been greater. However, one views the forecasted numbers for future population growth we will need in the immediate future to be feeding, clothing and housing many more people than we do inadequately at present. Plant breeding represents the most valuable strategy in increasing our productivity in a way that is sustainable and environmentally sensitive. Plant breeding can rightly be considered as one of the oldest multidisciplinary subjects that is known to humans. It was practised by people who first started to carry out a settled form of agriculture. The art as it must have been at that stage was applied without any formal underlying framework but achieved dramatic results as witnessed by the forms of cultivated plants we have today. We are now learning how to apply successfully the results of yet imperfect scientific knowledge. This knowledge is however rapidly developing particularly in areas of tissue culture, biotechnology and molecular biology. Plant breeding's inherent multifaceted nature means that alongside obvious subject areas like genetics we also need to consider areas such as statistics, physiology, plant pathology, entomology, biochemistry, weed science, quality seed characteristics, reproductive biology, trial design, selection and computing. It therefore seems apparent that modern plant breeders need to have a grasp of wide range of scientific knowledge and expertise if they are successfully to exploit the techniques, protocols and strategies which are open to them.
