Young, 2002 This book examines the manner in which Shakespeare's Hamlet was perceived in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries and represented in the available visual media The more than 2 000 visual images of Hamlet that the author has identified both reflected the critical reception of the play and simultaneously influenced the history of the ever changing constructed cultural phenomenon that we refer to as Shakespeare The visual material considered in this study offers a unique perspective that complements biographical critical and theater history studies by showing how a broad spectrum of the literate and not so literate absorbed and responded to Shakespeare's works not necessarily in academic libraries or at play performances but in their homes when browsing in print shops when reading in coffee houses or a far rarer experience when visiting an art gallery or exhibition Shakespeare, Time and the Victorians Stuart Sillars, 2011-12-15 Time and the visual sense were two essential preoccupations of the Victorians and both were central to their presentations of Shakespeare's plays In this extensive new study Stuart Sillars examines multiple facets of this complex relationship The desire for authenticity in production in the work of Charles Kean and his followers leads to elaborate sets that define and direct the performances movement through time Visual artists of all kinds fracture and extend the plays movements the Pre Raphaelites through new techniques and approaches illustrators through new forms of engraving and printing and photographers through the emerging forms of the medium The book also considers the multiple forms in which performances were recorded and re created visually and absorbed into the memories of their viewers With many previously unpublished images it draws together multiple fields to offer a new perspective on one of the most productive and various periods of Shakespeare activity
