Asia and Pacific Dept,2018-07-27 Singapore s economy is on a strong cyclical upswing Economic growth has recovered to a three year high led by externally oriented sectors that benefitted from the synchronized global expansion Economic momentum is becoming more broad based helping to reduce the labor market slack Growth is expected at or above the potential rate in the near term increasingly supported by domestic demand Inflation is subdued but expected to rise modestly The current account surplus as a share of GDP has remained large Risks to the near term outlook are broadly balanced and come mainly from external sources Over the medium term the structural transformation aimed to prepare Singapore for challenges from technological changes globally and population aging at home should help support higher productivity Crop Resistance Mechanisms to Alleviate Climate Change-Related Stress Jose Ramon Acosta Motos,Juan De Dios Franco-Navarro,Sara Álvarez,María José Gómez-Bellot,2024-02-20 Anthropogenic activities have aggravated the effects of global climate change on ecosystems Plants because of their inability to escape from an adverse environment suffer to a great extent from stresses which can negatively impact their growth and development Global warming is increasingly causing extreme climatic situations such as very high or low temperatures drought and flooding events hailstorms wildfires extreme precipitation events and the reduction of fertile soil through desertification and salinization In addition warmer temperatures and higher humidity related with the climate change can also increase pest and disease pressure on plants by altering the geographic range population size and timing of pest and disease outbreaks Taken together abiotic stress related with climate change as drought or extreme temperature can exacerbate the spread and severity of various diseases associated with biotic stress increasing the vulnerability of plants to pathogens some examples include insects fungi bacteria or viruses
