Shady Practices Agroforestry And Gender Politics In The Gambia:

Shady Practices Richard A. Schroeder, 1999 In this engaging and exceptionally well crafted case study Schroeder shows clearly how local dynamics intersect with wider processes Changes in cropping patterns land rights work routines and gender politics were shaped by multiple struggles and interactions among women and men landholders and land users farmers government officials and representatives of various international agencies Sara Berry author of No Condition Is Permanent

Liberation Ecologies Richard Peet, Michael Watts, 2004 Liberation Ecologies elaborates a political economic explanation of environmental crisis drawing from the most recent advances in social theory Historical Dictionary of The Gambia David Perfect, 2016-05-27 When The Gambia achieved its independence from Great Britain on 18 February 1965 as mainland Africa's smallest state its future seemed uncertain It retained this status for nearly 30 years An attempted coup d'état in July 1981 was put down but ironically when other African states were returning to democratic government Gambian democracy finally succumbed to a military coup on 22 July 1994 While civilian rule was restored in 1996 full democracy was not and a number of subsequent presidential and parliamentary elections have been far from free and fair while The Gambia's human rights record has been very poor since 1994 This fifth edition of Historical Dictionary of The Gambia contains a chronology an introduction and an extensive bibliography The dictionary section has over 700 cross referenced entries on important personalities politics economy foreign relations religion and culture This book is an excellent access point for students researchers and anyone wanting to know more about The Gambia

Producing Nature and Poverty in Africa Vigdis Broch-Due, Richard A. Schroeder, 2000 Drawing on case studies from eight different countries the contributors to this provocative collection of essays demonstrate quite clearly that environmental programmes often have direct and far reaching consequences for the distribution of wealth and poverty and that they constitute one of the major forms of foreign and state intervention in contemporary African affairs

Land, Labour and Entrustment Pamela Kea, 2010 Challenging portrayals of West African female farmers as a homogenous group the present study provides an ethnographic account of the contractual relations established between female hosts and migrants in the exchange of land and labour for agrarian production in The Gambia

Links Between Gendered Division of Labor and Land Use in Oloitokitok Division, S.E Kajiado District, Kenya Elizabeth Edna Wangui, 2004 Pastoral production systems have been undergoing endogenously and exogenously driven change in recent years One predominant change in pastoral production systems involves a shift from pure pastoralism to an integration of crop and livestock production In this study I explore the impact of one such livelihood and land use shift on gender roles and relations among the Ilkisongo Maasai of Oloitokitok Division in Southeast Kajiado District Kenya My research uses the feminist political ecology theoretical frameworks to investigate how gender roles and relations are related to land use patterns and how land use and gender roles and relations vary along the Mt Kilimanjaro ecological gradient I collected data using a variety of methods and at various scales The land use and land cover maps were

from secondary sources and they had been analyzed from Landsat MSS Landsat TM and SPOT imagery Data on cropping patterns labor allocation and intra household labor negotiations were collected from men and women in household interviews key informant interviews group meetings and through participant observation Irrigated and rain fed farming have expanded at the expense of grazing areas in the study area Crops are increasingly grown for sale Livestock kept and patterns of animal husbandry have also changed In irrigated areas men contribute most of the labor used in crop production Women contribute most of the labor required for livestock production in all the agro ecological zones Forces of change include structural adjustment policies the national land reform ecological conditions and a variety of social and political factors Patterns of labor negotiation display both cooperation and conflict within the households I also found gendered patterns of landscape use in both crop and livestock production in Oloitokitok Division In this study I argue for the re inclusion of men in gender analysis I contribute to the recent literature on masculinities by illustrating the role that men play in crop production in an agro pastoral community My findings also contribute to the literature on gender and pastoralism by arguing for the recognition of the importance of women in pastoral communities By including both men and women and investigating their relations within the crop and livestock production process I have made a contribution to the feminist political ecology theoretical framework I make a second contribution to feminist political ecology through a discussion on the gendered landscapes of cropping grazing conflict and marketing My third contribution to feminist political ecology is through the investigation of the processes of cooperation and conflict and how these change as livelihoods change My results have important implications for policy in agriculture and natural resource management Crop cultivation and livestock rearing need to be understood in the context of their gendered labor requirements Both men and women need to be engaged from the planning stages of agricultural development projects Natural resource management projects need to be understood as land uses that compete for land and labor with relatively more profitable land uses such as crop and livestock production In this study I also explore the implications that the results have for other pastoral societies in Eastern Africa

Gender and Development: Policy and practice Janet Henshall Momsen,2008 Environment & Planning ,2004 The

International Journal of African Historical Studies ,2000 Natural Resources Management and Gender Minke

Valk,2002 Increasing recognition of the interaction between poverty and resources and environmental degradation has led to interventions that put more and more emphasis on working with local communities to improve the management of the environment and natural resources Identifying and overcoming the barriers to women s and men s full participation in the management of resources is a necessary first step towards the ultimate goals of poverty alleviation and sustainable development Understanding the environmental roles and responsibilities of women and men is critical to sustainable resource management practices The chapters in the book reflect experiences with mainstreaming gender and women s issues in natural resources management The introductory paper focusing on the history and current status of gender and natural resources management is followed by five further papers presenting cases of this approach written by experts and practitioners from different parts of the world The papers examine diverse natural resources from different perspectives ranging from the household and community level to national and regional policy They examine the security of women's rights to common property resources and land in West Africa mainstreaming gender in water policy and institutions in Gujarat India gender responsive planning in wetland development in Uganda empowering women in managing natural resources in mountain areas of the Hindu Kush Himalayas of Pakistan and the development of gender policies for environmental ministries in Mesoamerica The papers are complemented by an extensive annotated bibliography including references to books journals and electronic documents and a list of relevant Web resources Together these resources provide a global overview of the work in this field Published in association with KIT Publishers African Studies Bulletin, 1999 Crude Chronicles Suzana Sawyer, 2004-06-07 Ethnographic study of indigenous opposition to processes of economic globalization arguing that neoliberal economic reforms both provoked a crisis of governance and created the conditions for a disruptive indigenous movement in Ecuador Africa, 2004 Includes Proceedings of the Executive council and List of members also section Review of books World Regions in Global Context Sallie A. Marston, Paul L. Knox, Diana M. Liverman, 2002 This explicitly global approach to world regional geography emphasizes global connections and the stories behind the maps and offers lively discussions of how these forces and processes play themselves out in individual places The authors make the most current and powerful ideas in geography accessible to the introductory student Emphasis on core regions key cities and distinctive landscapes accommodates a global connections approach as well as the course's traditional focus on places at the local scale The Peasant and Communist Past in the Making of an Ecological Region Eunice L. Blavascunas, 2008

Re-imagining Biangai Environments Jamon Alex Halvaksz, 2005 New Encyclopedia of Africa John Middleton, 2008 Contains a collection of alphabetically arranged entries from Nairobi to Symbols on the history geography culture religion and ideologies wars and economy of the African nations and includes essays and photographs Sharing Pastures, Building Dialogues Mara Jill Goldman, 2006 Canadian Journal of African Studies, 2007 West African Chimpanzees Rebecca Kormos, 2003 Wild chimpanzees are only found in tropical Africa where their populations have declined by more than 66% in the last 30 years This Action Plan focuses on one of the four chimpanzee subspecies the western chimpanzee which is one of the two subspecies most threatened with extinction This publication presents a plan for action that represents a consensus among all parties concerned with the conservation of chimpanzees
