Structure and Dynamics of Elliptical Galaxies Tim de Zeeuw, 2012-12-06 IAU Symposium 127 was held in Princeton on May 28-31 1986 at the Institute for Advanced Study There were 150 participants from 19 countries This was the first IAU Symposium devoted exclusively to elliptical galaxies The last decade has been a period of exceptionally rapid progress regarding our understanding of elliptical galaxies driven on the observational side by a wealth of new photometric and spectroscopic data and on the theoretical side by the recognition that ellipticals are slowly rotating triaxial systems instead of rotationally flattened bodies The 30 invited speakers reviewed all aspects of this progress its consequences and the major outstanding problems Nearly 80 poster contributions were displayed for the duration of the meeting These contained many of the most recent developments The first part of these Proceedings contains the written versions of the invited reviews and the summary in the order of their presentation The accompanying discussions are based on the written versions of questions and answers as handed in by the participants The second part of this book is devoted to the poster contributions They have been grouped in a thematic order proceeding from morphology to theory Indices of objects subjects and names are provided Unfortunately none of the invited participants from the USSR were able to attend the Symposium The Proceedings include the written versions of the planned contributions by Popov and Polyachenko

Heating versus Cooling in Galaxies and Clusters of Galaxies Hans Böhringer, Gabriel W. Pratt, Alexis Finoguenov, Peter Schuecker, 2007-09-27 The Universe would be a dull and dark place if the gaseous baryons did not cool collapse and form stars and galaxies However if this gas is allowed to cool unimpeded at the rate predicted from known atomic physics in the context of a well established cosmological model the gaseous matter would form stars and galaxies with a high efficiency so that far more than the observed fraction of about 10-15% of the baryonic matter would be found in luminous stellar systems Therefore cooling must be damped or regulated by heating processes and observations show that this feedback is a widespread astrophysical phenomenon The place where this cooling and feedback manifests itself most dramatically is in the inner regions of the most massive Dark Matter halos found in our Universe in the cores of galaxy clusters The effect of cosmic cooling in these objects was recognized in the mid 1970s and the term cooling flow was introduced by Andy Fabian and colleagues at Cambridge as a possible explanation of the physical processes obtained in the central regions of clusters The name refers to the fact that gas cooling in the inner regions is associated with a loss of central pressure causing an inflow of hot gas from larger radii
