Economic Research Service
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Calories (trillions)

Note: Three illustrative scenarios are shown: a static diet (per capita consumption of food calories remains constant at 2011 levels in all world regions) with medium population growth resulting in 9.75 billion people in 2050; an income-driven diet with medium population growth; and an income-driven diet with high population growth resulting in 10.8 billion people in 2050. The static diet is a point of comparison to quantify the effect of income growth on food consumption. Model simulations begin in 2011.
