

Signal Words

In order to be able to lead your reader in the direction you want to go, you will have to use strong transitions in your writing. You can do that in several ways: by using entire sentences to connect one thought to another, entire paragraphs to give more background information, or simply a word or two to indicate your intentions.

This list of signals is from The New Reading Teacher's Book of Lists, 1985 Prentice-Hall, Inc., Englewood Cliffs, NJ 07632. By E. Fry, D. Fountoukidis, and J. Polk.

1. Continuation Signals (Warning—there are more ideas to come):

and	also	another	again	and finally first of all	A final reason	furthermore	in addition	last of all moreover	likewise	more	moreover	next one reason	other	secondly	similarly	too with

2. Change-of-direction signals (Watch out—we're doubling back):

although	but	conversely	despite	different from even though	however	in contrast	instead of	in spite of nevertheless	otherwise	the opposite	on the contrary	on the other hand rather	still	yet	while	though

3. Sequence signals (There is an order to these ideas):

first, second, third	A, B, C	in the first place	for one thing	then next	before	now	after	while into (far into the night)	until	last	during	since always	O'clock	on time	later	earlier

Helps readers understand the writing process. Writing process research process. Anyone who wants to learn to write well. Forthcoming Books Rose Arny, 1996-10. Journal of Technical Writing and Communication, 1981. Research in Technical Communication Michael G. Moran, Debra Journet, 1985. This sourcebook demonstrates the vigorous work being done in the field of technical and scientific communication. Collectively the essays offer researchers a basis from which to begin constructing the theoretical framework necessary for the study of technical communication. The book begins with general concerns and progresses to particular applications. The chapters comprising Part I outline larger theoretical perspectives from which to examine technical communication: humanistic approaches to technical communication, the history of technical communication, communication theory and technical writing, and the teaching of technical writing. Part II examines the relationship of technical communication to traditional rhetorical concerns such as invention, audience, modes of organization, and style. Specific types of technical communication: proposals, reports, and business correspondence among others are discussed in Part III. The use of the computer, oral presentations, and specialized forms of technical communication are examined in Part IV. The appendixes offer guides to textbooks and style manuals and an overview of the technical writing profession. El-Hi Textbooks and Serials in Print, 2006. Grammar of English Communication Wilson Ober Clough, 1947. Communication Research Trends, 2005. The Allyn & Bacon Sourcebook for College Writing Teachers James C. McDonald, 1996. Designed for college writing teachers who are faced with teaching composition for the first time or re-examining their teaching goals and methods. The Allyn & Bacon Sourcebook for College Writing Teachers is a collection of writings on important theories and pedagogies in composition studies. The selections discuss a range of theories and approaches to teaching writing and present readers with a number of options for instruction rather than a single way to teach. Written by some of today's foremost scholars and teachers, the articles range from discussing how to integrate critical thinking and reading into writing instruction to methods for responding to and evaluating student writing to dealing with grammar and editing. For those who teach writing.
