Strategies for Gifted Students in Elementary School Liuchang (Helen), 2002. Gifted students have special needs through qualitatively differentiated learning opportunities. PECSG Planning Effective Curriculum Strategies Gifted is designed to provide curriculum strategies in which students do not encounter limitations to their cognitive and affective development. The goals of the PECSG program is to assure appropriately differentiated learning opportunities through curriculum model to make gifted students achieve maximum learning outcomes in elementary school. Teachers designed special curriculum to enhance specific learning opportunities for gifted students and to develop the differentiation learning skills. An effective curriculum strategy for students who are gifted is essentially a basic curriculum that has been modified to meet their needs. The unique characteristics of the gifted students must serve as the basis for decisions on how the curriculum should be designed and modified. Teachers can encourage students to demonstrate what they have learned in a wide variety of forms that reflect both knowledge and the ability to manipulate ideas. This research questionnaire for students are from two countries in four aspects Gifted students interested in learning process teachers teaching methods meet gifted students gifted students have most participation opportunities gifted students achieve leaning outcomes from teachers instruction The results of the data that were collected shows the curriculum strategies have met gifted students needs they are interested in their learning process the teachers used teaching methods and materials to adapt their needs they could have more chances to participate and express their ideas and they could achieve their learning performance from teachers instruction in the curriculum
