Platelets In Biology And Pathology

John Martin,Anthony Trowbridge

Platelets In Biology And Pathology:

Platelets in Biology and Pathology ,1976 Platelet Heterogeneity John Martin,Anthony Trowbridge,2012-12-06 Battle is a practical and sometimes lasting way of solving man s problems It relies on the strength of the combatants and ignores the truth of the dispute Discussion face to face can dissolve attitudes which have incorrectly determined judgements The most striking example of this that I know is a Battle in Ireland in the eleventh century where the king of Leinster fought a Viking prince The Icelanders had raided Ireland for several generations in search of women which they lacked since most of the population of Iceland were men who had arrived there by rowing long boats from Norway The prince was leading such a raid for the first time Standing in the prow of the leading boat he saw Irish cavalry galloping along the beach to meet them As they approached the shore the Irish king rode out of the band to challenge single combat The Iclander jumped into the surf to meet him As they raised their swords each realized that the other s face was like his own When the Irish king spoke the other recognized the language It had been spoken in Iceland by his grandmother who had been captured and taken there from Ireland Swords were dropped and replaced by drinking horns It was soon established that they were cousins The battle gave way to a life time of close co operation Platelets in Biology and Pathology III D. E. MacIntyre,J. L. Gordon,1987

Platelets in Biology and Pathology 2 J. L. Gordon,1981 Platelets as Immune Cells in Physiology and Immunopathology Olivier Garraud,2016-01-05 Are platelets cells Not everyone agrees since they are non nucleate And if platelets are cells which all specialists consider at the time being are they immune cells The issue that platelets participate in immunity is no longer debated however the issue that they are key cells in immunity is challenged It has even been proposed a couple of years ago that platelets can present antigen to T lymphocytes by using their HLA class I molecules No one has the same functional definition of platelets The Frontiers Research Topic coordinators own view is that platelets are primarily repairing cells what they do in deploying tools of physiological inflammation This function is better acknowledged as primary hemostasis i e platelet adherence to injured or wounded vessels followed by activation aggregation and constitution of the initial clot Platelets would thus repair damaged vascular endothelium so doing as they patrol to detect damages they sense danger along the vascular arborescence As the latter is immense platelets get close to tissues which are not allowed to them under physiological conditions but are readily accessible in pathology Platelets are equipped with a variety of Pathogen Recognition Receptors such as TLRs they have a complete signalosome which is functional until the phosphorylation of NFkB they have been proved to retro transcribe RNA and synthesize de novo proteins etc Platelets participate to inflammation along the whole spectrum from physiological tissue repair healing to acute severe inflammation as can be seen in e g sepsis In general platelets engage complex interactions with most infectious pathogens We propose there to cover those topics from physiology to pathology that put platelets within cells that not only take place in but also are key players of innate immunity The relation of platelets with adaptive immunity is even more complex Not everyone is convinced that platelets present

antigens however platelets influence adaptive immunity since they have mutual interactions with Dendritic cells Monocytes Macrophages and B lymphocytes the key players of antigen presentation they also have mutual interactions with T lymphocytes though this issue is less clearly deciphered We propose to also cover these topics or to present the forum There is another issue which is medically relevant speaking of physiology physiopathology this is fetal maternal incompatibility of platelet specific antigens the HPA system and the likely formation of maternal antibodies that often injure the newborn with risks of severe thrombocytopenia and intracranial hemorrhage We propose an update on this issue as well Last platelets are very special because they can be directly therapeutic by transfusion even when being offered by a generous blood donor displaying given genetic and phenotypic parameters to a patient recipient in need who also displays his/her own genetic and phenotypic parameters which for a large part differ from the donor's ones Besides immunization via mechanisms probably close to the fetal maternal platelet incompatibility but likely not similar transfusion has allowed the identification of the tremendous capacity of platelets to mediate inflammation we propose to conclude the Topics with this item forum
