Right To Challenge People Power In The:

People Power Dan Jellinek, 2013-07-04 As protestors around the world risk their lives in pursuit of democracy in the UK the word has never seemed so tarnished Surveys regularly show our politicians are not liked not trusted and not wanted Voter turnout is shockingly low and episodes such as the MPs expenses scandal serve to confirm the opinion that public officials are all as bad as each other So what is the answer Lighting the way through the corridors of power Dan Jellinek provides a unique and accessible guide to democracy in Britain explaining how its elements work from national and local government to free speech the internet and the rule of law and the role that we the public need to play to keep the wheels turning Illustrated by Harry Venning Clare in the Community Hamlet People Power s mission is not only to explain but to galvanise and engage people in a positive way If you want to know how your small actions can bring about big changes how you can improve your lot and the lives of others then you must read this book Stand up and be counted The power is in your hands

The Human Rights Challenge to Immunity in International Law Selman Özdan, 2022-02-12 This book focuses on the tension between the protection of human rights recognised as jus cogens peremptory norms on the one hand and the bestowal of immunity on the state and its representatives on the other to ascertain how these immunities can be eroded if not fully abolished to maintain full protection of jus cogens human rights under international law The book argues that immunity should not equate to impunity when violations of jus cogens human rights are committed by States Heads of State or diplomatic agents To make the case the organic structures of the concepts of sovereignty and fundamental human rights are examined Then the human rights based challenge to immunity is presented with respect to State Head of State and diplomatic immunity and the transition from a state centric system to a human centric system is explored Jus cogens norms are at the centre of the impunity versus immunity debate

Fair and Equitable Benefit-sharing in International Law Elisa Morgera, 2024-04-24 Fair and equitable benefit sharing is a diffuse legal phenomenon in international law The continued proliferation of benefit sharing clauses can be explained by their appeal as an optimistic frame in addressing sustainability and equity concerns related to bio based innovation the use of natural resources environmental protection and knowledge creation In principle fair and equitable benefit sharing serves to recognize encourage and incentivise sustainable human relationships with the environment by focusing on equity issues arising from the most intractable challenges of our time such as loss of biodiversity climate change poverty and global epidemics Empirical evidence however indicates that in practice benefit sharing rarely achieves its fairness and equity objectives and ends up entrenching or worsening inequitable relationships with little to no benefit for the environment Instead of focusing on fair and equitable benefit sharing in sub specialist areas of international law in isolation Elisa Morgera assesses the phenomenon from a general international law perspective and through comparison across international environmental law international human rights law international health law and the law of the sea Strengthened by insights from local level case studies in different regions and sectors this book looks toward overcoming the limitations inherent in individual international regimes and addressing the shortcomings in benefit sharing implementation Morgera's topical and comprehensive analysis reveals opportunities to advance fairness and equity in benefit sharing through a mutually supportive interpretation of international biodiversity law and international human rights law as well as opportunities to contribute to future research in areas such as international health law international law on outer space and international economic law This is an open access title It is made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives 4.0 International licence It is available to read and download as a PDF version on the Oxford Academic platform

Social Cognition, Motivation, and Interaction: How Do People Respond to Threats in Social Interactions? Eva Jonas, Christina

Mühlberger, 2018-01-12 If we want to understand people's responses to threats in social interactions we can distinguish between three levels of analysis On a social level of analysis we can describe people's interpersonal behavior on a cognitive level we can identify corresponding information processing mechanisms and on a neural level we can specify neural systems which underlie these processes In this Research Topic we want to present research connecting these three levels of analysis and propose their functional interconnection in social interaction We propose that threats in social interactions activate basic motivational processes which manifest in neural processes related to behavioral inhibition vs activation in a social situation This shapes our attention to new information and affects our cognitions about social identities belief systems and worldviews These changes in social cognition in turn affect people s behavior in social interactions and lead to corresponding reactions on behalf of the interaction partner Thus we assume that people s reactions to threat in interactions can be described as sequences of broader attentional processes resulting from basic motivational tendencies leading to specific social cognitions and subsequent behavior within social interactions We can analyze this sequence in order to contribute to a better understanding of social interactions The three levels of analyses social cognitive neural shed light on social interactions from different angles On the social level we can analyze how the behaviors of the interaction partners mutually affect each other and how this is accompanied by specific cognitive emotional and motivational processes On the cognitive level we can analyze people s perception of a social situation leading to attentional and reasoning processes with regard to their interaction partner s which may be accompanied by certain emotional and motivational processes and determines the behavior towards the partner s Finally we can focus on the neural mechanisms underlying cognitive emotional and motivational processes in social interactions
