Quaternary Extinctions A Prehistoric Revolution:

Quaternary Extinctions Paul S. Martin, Richard G. Klein, 1989-01-01 What caused the extinction of so many animals at or near the end of the Pleistocene Was it overkill by human hunters the result of a major climatic change or was it just a part of some massive evolutionary turnover Questions such as these have plagued scientists for over one hundred years and are still being heatedly debated today Quaternary Extinctions presents the latest and most comprehensive examination of these questions Geological Magazine May be regarded as a kind of standard encyclopedia for Pleistocene vertebrate paleontology for years to come American Scientist Should be read by paleobiologists biologists wildlife managers ecologists archeologists and anyone concerned about the ongoing extinction of plants and animals Science Uncommonly readable and varied for watchers of paleontology and the rise of humankind Scientific American Represents a quantum leap in our knowledge of Pleistocene and Holocene palaeobiology Many volumes on our bookshelves are destined to gather dust rather than attention But not this one Nature Two strong impressions prevail when first looking into this epic compendium One is the judicious balance of views that range over the whole continuum between monocausal cultural or environmental explanations The second is that both the data base and theoretical sophistication of the protagonists in the debate have improved by a quantum leap since 1967 American Anthropologist

Extinctions in Near Time Ross D.E. MacPhee, Hans-Dieter Sues, 2013-11-09 Near time an interval that spans the last 100 000 years or so of earth history qualifies as a remarkable period for many reasons From an anthropocentric point of view the out standing feature of near time is the fact that the evolution cultural diversification and glob al spread of Homo sapiens have all occurred within it From a wider biological perspective however the hallmark of near time is better conceived of as being one of enduring repeat ed loss The point is important Despite the sense of uniqueness implicit in phrases like the biodiversity crisis meant to convey the notion that the present bout of extinctions is by far the worst endured in recent times substantial losses have occurred throughout near time In the majority of cases these losses occurred when and only when people began to ex pand across areas that had never before experienced their presence Although the explana tion for these correlations in time and space may seem obvious it is one thing to rhetori cally observe that there is a connection between humans and recent extinctions and quite another to demonstrate it scientifically How should this be done Traditionally the study of past extinctions has fallen largely to researchers steeped in such disciplines as paleontology systematics and paleoecology The evaluation of future losses by contrast has lain almost exclusively within the domain of conservation biolo gists Now more than ever there is opportunity for overlap and sharing of information

Human origin sites and the World Heritage convention in the Americas, Volume II UNESCO Office Mexico, 2015-12-31 History of Terrestrial Mammals in South America Thomas Defler, 2018-12-19 This book takes a non technical approach in covering the evolution of South American mammalian fauna throughout geological history and discusses how South America has changed due to mammalian invasions Unlike other works on the subject this book attempts to answer several crucial questions that often go unmentioned together in one cohesive monograph What was the fauna like before the American interchange What were the origins of the now extinct groups when northern species arrived and out competed them How did the modern mammalian fauna come into being with such disparate animal groups This information is given from a historical perspective throughout the book s 15 chapters and is presented in an easily graspable fashion by mostly avoiding technical language The book is written for academics scientists and scholars engaged in paleontology zoology and evolutionary biology but may also appeal to a larger audience of general readers interested in mammalian evolution The book begins with an introduction describing the tools necessary to interpret the evolutionary history of South American mammals in geological terms and some of the early people who helped found South American mammalian paleontology Chapter 2 describes the Mesozoic first mammals of Gondwana and what we are learning about them dominant before the K T extinction event Then chapters 3 through 8 cover the Cenozoic or Age of Mammals highlighting the major mammalian groups of South America that replaced the earlier mammals of Gondwana These groups include the marsupials native ungulates the xenarthrans armadillos anteaters sloths the caviomorphs rodents and the platyrrhine monkeys Chapters 9 and 10 address the Antarctic La Meseta fossils and the Colombian La Venta fossil faunal assemblages Chapter 11 discusses the neotropical mammals that invaded the Caribbean Islands and illustrates the influence South America has had on adjacent faunas Chapter 12 describes the origin of the Amazon River and the role it has played in the evolution of the mammals and other flora and fauna Chapter 13 tells the story of the Great American Biotic Interchange GABI and chapter 14 follows this up with a discussion of the Pleistocene mammal communities and their eventual extinction Chapter 15 concludes the text by discussing the modern mammals of South America and how despite the extensive Pleistocene extinctions there is still a lot of mammalian diversity in South America Global Environmental Change

Antoinette Mannion,2014-09-19 Now in its second edition This text has been extensively revised and rewritten to reflect the growth in environmental research during the last decade Human induced environmental change is occurring at such a rapid rate that inevitably the fundamental processes involved in biogeochemical cycling are being altered Global Environmental Change considers alterations to the biogeochemical cycles of carbon nitrogen sulphur and other elements as a result of industrial technological development and agriculture which have significantly altered the natural environment The book adopts a temporal and spatial approach to environmental change beginning with the natural environmental change of the Quaternary period and continuing with the culturally induced change since the inception of agriculture 10 000 years ago

Native Americans and the Environment Michael Eugene Harkin,David Rich Lewis,2007-01-01 Often cited as one of the most decisive campaigns in military history the Seven Days Battles were the first campaign in which Robert E Lee led the Army of Northern Virginia as well as the first in which Lee and Thomas Stonewall Jackson worked together Neues
