The Moral Development of Health Professionals

Bertram Bandman, 2003-08-30 A central challenge motivates this work How if at all can philosophical ethics help in the moral development of health professionals Bandman s three part response is to argue first that there are justifiable answers to questions in health care ethics To support this idea he singles out a trilogy of related health care rights that are justifiably held by health consumers and for which health providers are responsible These include rights to respect to receive and to refuse treatment These are vital to the principle of informed consent and to patient and provider autonomy Secondly the functioning of these health care rights depends on the ongoing cultivation and habitual practice of relevant virtues such as dedicated and trained intelligence practical wisdom responsibility caring and integrity Thirdly Bandman tries to show how health care ethics makes use of the dynamic interplay between significant and relevant cases historical and current real and imaginary along with recognition of laws customs conventions and rules together with philosophical theories of morality An underlying theme of this book is the role of conditionals in health care ethics The aim of Bandman s work is to examine conditions and opportunities that promote the moral development of health professionals Moral rights and virtues comprising standards can be taught and learned known understood and accepted These standards comprise justifiable principles for effectively guiding the conduct of health professionals Rights and virtues help differentiate right from wrong decisions in health care ethics and thereby provide an appropriate basis for the moral development of health professionals

Living Faith Jacques Ellul, 2012-06-12
Living Faith is a groundbreaking exploration of the meaning and dynamics of Christian faith today by a major theologian and social critic of our time Jacques Ellul thoughtfully examines all aspects of the phenomenon we call faith to distill the essential characteristics of true Christianity He argues cogently for a crucial distinction between religion based on a faith that is nothing more than a reflection of our own circumstances and consciousness and genuine

Christian Faith which concerns itself primarily with revelation Such a Living Faith he points out is an open honest courageous response to a divine disclosure of the Wholly Other God that impels us beyond comfortable answers to see everything in a light which is not that of reason experience or common sense Good Questions on Belief and Doubt Christianity Today International Staff, Prof J I Packer, PH.D, Alister McGrath, E, Craig S Keener, Ph.D., Timothy George, Dr Bruce Shelley, Nancy Ortberg, 2011-06 The Good Question Bible Studies series is based on questions asked by Christianity Today readers and the responses from remarkable voices of seasoned scholars and experienced leaders Each of the six sessions in Good Questions on Belief Doubt includes a thought provoking article Groups will think and talk together about such questions as Why does God answer some prayers for healing but not mine If Jesus was God how could the eternal God die How do I determine which Scriptures apply today and which do not The Good Question Bible Studies will challenge groups to wrestle with the issues and grow sharper stronger and closer to each other and to God along the way Each of the six sessions in Good Questions on Belief Doubt features A thought provoking article from J I Packer Alister McGrath Craig S Keener Timothy George Bruce Shelley or Nancy Ortberg Relationship building exercises Engaging questions An in depth look at Scripture A Treatise on the Law of Evidence in Criminal Issues Francis Wharton, 1880 Proceedings of the American Society for Psychical Research American Society for Psychical Research, 1889 Attention, predictions and expectations, and their violation: attentional control in the human brain Simone Vossel, Joy J. Geng, Karl J. Friston, 2015-05-20 In the burdened scenes of everyday life our brains must select from among many competing inputs for perceptual synthesis so that only the most relevant receive full attention and irrelevant distracting information is suppressed At the same time we must remain responsive to salient events outside our current focus of attention and balancing these two processing modes is a fundamental task our brain constantly needs to solve Both the physical saliency of a stimulus as well as top down predictions about imminent sensations crucially influence attentional selection and consequently the response to unexpected events Research over recent decades has identified two separate brain networks involved in predictive top down control and reorientation to unattended events or oddball stimuli the dorsal and ventral fronto parietal attention systems of the human brain Moreover specific electrophysiological brain responses are known to characterize attentional orienting as well as the processing of deviant stimuli However many key questions are outstanding What are the exact functional differences between these cortical attention systems How are they lateralised in the two hemispheres How do top down and bottom up signals interact to enable flexible attentional control How does structural damage to one system affect the functionality of the other in brain damaged patients Are there sensory specific and supra modal attentional systems in the brain In addition to these questions it is now accepted that brain responses are not only affected by the saliency of external stimuli but also by our expectations about sensory inputs How these two influences are balanced and how predictions are formed in cortical networks or generated on the basis of experience dependent learning are intriguing issues In this Research Topic we aim to collect innovative contributions that shed further light on the cortical mechanisms of attentional control in the human brain. In particular, we would like to encourage submissions that investigate the behavioural correlates, functional anatomy or electrophysiological markers of attentional selection and reorientation. Special emphasis will be given to studies investigating the context sensitivity of these attentional processes in relation to prior expectations, trial history, contextual cues or physical saliency. We would like to encourage submissions employing different research methods: psychophysical recordings, neuroimaging techniques such as fMRI, MEG, EEG or ECoG, as well as neurostimulation methods such as TMS or tDCS in healthy volunteers or neurological patients. Computational models and animal studies are also welcome. Finally, we also welcome submission of meta-analyses and reviews, articles that provide new insights into or conclusions about recent work in the field.
