International Policy Perspectives on Improving Learning with Limited Resources Carolin Kreber, 2006-05-12. This volume brings together an impressive group of higher education specialists from nine countries who discuss the higher education policy perspectives from their respective nationalities in particular policies aimed at enhancing the quality of university teaching and learning. As higher education institutions experience a decline in government funding, they face growing pressure to demonstrate their legitimacy and purpose. Although participation in higher education internationally has widened as a result of national policies ensuring greater access, higher education institutions today compete within a common global market for staff, students, graduates and alternative sources of income. The intent of the volume is to offer much needed documentation of policy approaches taken in a number of countries but also an analysis of why certain approaches are more effective than others, why some fail or perhaps most important, why some are effective and feasible in one country but not in another.

International Policy Perspectives on Improving Learning with Limited Resources is the 133rd issue of the quarterly journal New Directions for Higher Education published by Jossey-Bass.
