Difference between Data and Information

Data as Explained

The name of a student, the scores/grades of students in certain subjects or personal details of a student – these all are what we call “data”.

Information as Explained

If the data mentioned above are arranged according to alphabetical order, or as to the ranks of students, the presentation of data is called “information”.

Types of Data

Data can be apportioned into various types depending upon the value contained:

- Qualitative – when the data qualifies the characteristics of things e.g., cloudy days, bad eggs, etc.
- Quantitative – when the data quantifies the measures of things, e.g., 100 kilograms, 5 litres, etc.
- Numerical – when the data consists of integer values or real numbers (fractions)
- Character & String – when the data consists of a sequence of alphabets and special characters, e.g., names, address

Database

It is a repository of data organized in the form of rows and columns. Each row is recognized as a record and each column is considered to be a field.

For example:

An employee database may contain the following columns:

- Employee Number
- Employee Name
- Employee Designation
- Employee Address, etc.

reason it is necessary to give stimulation to the business practice how to handle goals structures and initiatives of such a new perspective There is a permanently increasing supply of hardware and software solutions to support or partly take over the processes of the company The balanced scorecard respects soft facts in its calculations In the digital economy these soft facts become more and more important In former times the managing directors of SME often ignored the knock on effect of soft facts They orientated mainly about financial figures But the digital economy has to consider different strategies Some statistics depict that even up to 80% of a company s profits in the digital economy depend on soft facts Managers have to learn dealing with soft facts and intrinsic values As DRUCKER says the experience of every employee can be used as a source of value added An employ Process Control and Automation ,1963 Human Resource Planning ,1986
