The European Union's Influence in Central Asia Olga Alinda Spaiser, 2018-03-12 Unknown yet highly strategic Central Asia attracts the interest of major global powers due to its vast energy resources and crucial geographic position. Russia, China, and the European Union view this region as an indispensable springboard to enhance their political and economic influence on the Eurasian landmass. Thus, facing strong competition and working on a low budget, the EU is attempting to establish itself as a relevant and influential actor in an environment in which its leadership role is far from certain. Unlike in other post-communist regions, the EU is not able to rely on the attractiveness of its political models and risks being marginalized by other global powers. The crucial question then is: How does the EU exert influence in such a challenging geopolitical context? Which strategies does the EU apply to be an actor who counts? Through an analysis of the EU's discourse instruments and the reception of its policies in Central Asia, this study argues that the EU consciously takes the position of a second-tier actor who acts as a consultant and projects a picture of itself as an honest broker with no geopolitical agenda. The EU's influence is confined to niche domains in the security sphere that are nevertheless important for the regional security. The EU is not a great power in the region nor is it willing to become one. It does, however, have comparative advantages in being perceived as inoffensive and for occupying areas that are neglected by the other actors, such as governance and water security.

Konfigurationen krisenhafter Wahrnehmung in der Literatur um 1900 Jan Rohden, 2017-11-13 In der Literatur um 1900 schlagen sich zwei folgenreiche Entwicklungen nieder, die das Individuum an der Epochenschwelle in Unsicherheit versetzen: zum einen der Verlust historischer und metaphysischer Orientierung, zum anderen eine Krise der Wahrnehmung. Die Konsequenzen dieser beiden Prozesse für die Sinnbildungsstrategien des Subjekts zeichnet Jan Rohden am Beispiel europäischer Autoren des Fin de Siècle nach. Er arbeitet heraus, wie in Texten von Huysmans, D'Annunzio, Hofmannsthal und Wilde jeweils der Versuch unternommen wird, die verspürte historisch-metaphysische Orientierungslosigkeit zu kompensieren. Die gemeinsame Grundlage dafür und zugleich ein charakteristisches Merkmal aller Werke bildet eine spezifische Form der Wahrnehmung. At the end of the 19th century, two important developments which both effect fin de siècle literature unsettle the European subject: the loss of historical and metaphysical security on the one hand and a profound crisis of perception on the other. Jan Rohden examines the effects of both developments on the European subject's solution approaches for finding historical and metaphysical meaning. In his analysis of selected texts of Huysmans, D'Annunzio's, Hofmannsthal's, and Wilde's, he identifies a similar attempt of all the four authors to compensate for the lack of historical and metaphysical meaning, which is based on a specific form of perception.
