Perspectives Anthropology:

Anthropological Perspectives on Technology Michael B. Schiffer, 2001 These fourteen original essays accept a dual premise technology pervades and is embedded in all human activities By taking that approach studies of technology address two questions central in anthropological and archaeological research today accounting for variability and change These diverse yet interrelated chapters show that to understand human lives researchers must deal with the material world that all peoples create and inhabit Therefore an anthropology of technology is not a separate discrete inquiry instead it is a way to connect how people make and use things to any activity studied ranging from religion to enculturation to communication to art Each contributor discusses theories and methods and also offers a substantial case study These detailed inquiries span human societies from the Paleolithic to the computer age By moving beyond the usual approach of examining ancient technologies particularly chipped stone and low fired ceramics this volume probes for the construction of meaning in the material world across millennia The authors of these essays find technology to be an inclusive and flexible topic that merges with studies of everything else in human activity A provocative and powerful discussion of the role of technology in human cultures At a time when archaeology has become less focused on theory and archaeology and social anthropology seem to fracture farther and farther apart the book is a breath of fresh air Professor John Douglas University of Montana

The Anthropology of Landscape Eric Hirsch, Michael O'Hanlon, 1995 Landscape has long had a submerged presence within anthropology both as a framing device which informs the way the anthropologist brings his or her study into view and as the meaning imputed by local people to their cultural and physical surroundings A principal aim of this volume follows from these interconnected ways of considering landscape the conventional Western notion of landscape may be used as a productive point of departure from which to explore analogous ideas local ideas can in turn reflexively be used to interrogate the Western construct The Introduction argues that landscape should be conceptualized as a cultural process a process located between place and space foreground actuality and background potentiality image and representation In the chapters that follow nine noted anthropologists and an art historian exemplify this approach drawing on a diverse set of case studies These range from an analysis of Indian calendar art to an account of Israeli nature tourism and from the creation of a metropolitan gaze in nineteenth century Paris to the soundscapes particular to the Papua New Guinean rainforests The anthropological perspectives developed here are of cross disciplinary relevance geographers art historians and archaeologists will be no less interested than anthropologists in this re envisaging of the notion of landscape
