April May and June 1994 The killings occurred in spite of the presence of UN troops in Rwanda and the members of the UN Security Council were slow to call the Tutsi extermination genocide hence evading the obligation to intervene and stop the slaughter as stipulated by international law MSF met with government officials and issued public statements to try to mobilise governments out of their inertia eventually calling to an international armed intervention These statements and actions resulted from numerous debates conflicts and contradictory interpretations of the Rwandan situation and of MSF s role addressing the following dilemmas Was it acceptable for a humanitarian organisation to remain silent when confronted with genocide or on the contrary to call for armed intervention an action that would lead to loss of human life Could MSF call on UN member states to pursue other means of action thereby risking giving legitimacy to ineffective responses given the nature of genocide Launched just as France proposed to intervene in Rwanda was there a risk that MSF s appeal for armed intervention would be appropriated for political gain The Garden ,1895 Find the Woman Gelett Burgess,2008-10
