

QUANTITATIVE ANALYSIS / SOCIAL SURVEY

The measurement of quantity or amount is the foundation of quantitative inquiry. It is applied to phenomena that have a quantitative form. Both quantitative measurement and statistical analysis are used in this study. What proportion of students majoring in medical engineering, law, the arts, sciences, or business, for instance, use drugs or alcohol of such sort? An example of a quantitative research approach is a social survey.

A "fact finding" study is a social survey. It is a research technique that involves gathering information from a population or a sample of it at a certain period. It should not be confused with simple clerical tasks like collecting and adding up numbers. It requires meticulous study, creative planning, and logical interpretation of the results. Data may be gathered by observation, interviews, or the sending of surveys. Depending on the goals of the research, basic or advanced statistical methods may be used to analyze the data.

What is the topic of surveys?

Surveys are useful in many facets of human behavior, societal structures, economic systems, and commercial endeavors. The following categories may be used to classify survey topic matter:

a) Social polls

1. A set of people's demographic details
2. The people's social surroundings
3. Individual perspectives and behaviors
4. Human actions and behavior

b) Economic surveys

1. People's economic circumstances;
2. The operation of economic entities
