Quality and Recognition in Higher Education Centre for Educational Research and Innovation, Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, 2004-08-04 Cross border education is undergoing new and growing developments such as e learning for profit providers joint campuses and transnational consortia These changes are challenging existing national quality assurance and accreditation frameworks and agencies At the same time increasing student and professional mobility across borders has emphasised the importance of mutual recognition of academic and professional qualifications This book gives an updated overview of how a number of countries are dealing with these challenges as well as examining international frameworks on recognition of qualifications including UNESCO Regional Conventions and trade agreements A key conclusion from this overview is that the national framework of quality assurance accreditation and recognition of degrees is in many cases insufficiently geared towards addressing the quality of cross border and private provision This increases the risk that learners are victims of rogue degree providers degree mills offering low quality educational experiences and qualifications of limited value In order to fill in this gap of the existing frameworks OECD and UNESCO are currently working together on developing non binding international guidelines on Quality Provision in Cross border Higher Education FURTHER READING A companion volume Internationalisation and Trade in Higher Education analyses the major trends and developments in cross border post secondary education Quality and Recognition in Higher Education, 2004

International Conference,Antony Stella,2002 Contributed papers presented at a conference held in 2001 at Bangalore Higher Education Quality Assurance in Sub-Saharan Africa Peter Nicolas Materu,2007 This report assesses the status and practice of higher education quality assurance in Sub Sahara Africa focusing on degree granting tertiary institutions A main finding is that structured national level quality assurance processes in African higher education are a very recent phenomenon and that most countries face major capacity constraints Only about a third of them have established structured national quality assurance mechanism often only as recently as during the last ten years Activities differ in their scope and rigor ranging from simple licensing of institutions by the minister responsible for higher education to comprehensive system wide program accreditation and ranking of institutions Within institutions of higher learning self assessment and academic audits are gradually being adopted to supplement traditional quality assurance methods However knowledge about and experience with self assessments are limited The main challenges to quality assurance system in Africa are cost and human capacity requirements For countries with large tertiary systems the report recommends institutional rather than program accreditation as a cost effective option However where tertiary systems are small and underdeveloped a less formal self assessment for each institution may be necessary until the capacity could be strengthened to support a more formal nation quality assurance agency in the long run

Quality Assurance in Higher Education Stamelos Georgios, K.M. Joshi, Saeed Paivandi, 2017-01-30 The significant growth of number of students enrolled in tertiary education institutions in the recent past decades has caused an unprecedented expansion of higher education systems The rapid and constant social economic and technological mutations and international competition make the importance of qualitatively well educated citizenry and labor forces very decisive Globalization has developed a powerful impact on the development of higher education and imposes new challenges for the organization standards financing regulations Systems of higher education tend to detach from the national models and adopt a more global orientation The implementation of quality assurance is one of the recent and most decisive transformations of higher education Different higher education systems are trying to develop assessment tools internal and external to improve the quality of teaching research and extension activities and these are either based on experiences of selected countries or are extensively country specific. The quality assurance procedures that were often dependent on national directorial traditions have gradually tended to converge and led to a setup of common tools and standards. Countries under a centralized system tend to impose a uniform and general model while decentralized systems give greater freedom to universities to set up their own quality. International rankings of universities also contribute to impose a set of transnational standards and values which is also being considered as indicative by the stakeholders. The present book tries to look at the quality assurance mechanism international rankings and its impact in both absolute and comparative fashion in context of 11 countries from different parts of the world.
