Quality Of Expression:

Expression of emotion in music and vocal communication Anjali Bhatara, Petri Laukka, Daniel J. Levitin, 2014-08-18
Two of the most important social skills in humans are the ability to determine the moods of those around us and to use this to guide our behavior. To accomplish this we make use of numerous cues. Among the most important are vocal cues from both speech and non speech sounds. Music is also a reliable method for communicating emotion. It is often present in social situations and can serve to unify a group's mood for ceremonial purposes: funerals, weddings or general social interactions. Scientists and philosophers have speculated on the origins of music and language and the possible common bases of emotional expression through music, speech and other vocalizations. They have found increasing evidence of commonalities among them. However, the domains in which researchers investigate these topics do not always overlap or share a common language, so communication between disciplines has been limited. The aim of this Research Topic is to bring together research across multiple disciplines related to the production and perception of emotional cues in music, speech and non verbal vocalizations. This includes natural sounds produced by human and non human primates as well as synthesized sounds. Research methodology includes survey, behavioral and neuroimaging techniques investigating adults as well as developmental populations including those with atypical development. Studies using laboratory tasks as well as studies in more naturalistic settings are included.

Media Intertextualities Mie Hiramoto, 2012 This collection of critical essays originally published in Pragmatics and Society 1 2 2010 discusses how normative biases that shape our relation to the world are constructed through discursive practice in media discourse. The intertextual perspective it adopts is crucial for our understanding of how media representations of speakers and languages shape many of our preconceptions of others. Mediatization is inherently intertextual; the very nature of this process involves extracting the speech behavior of particular speakers or groups from a highly specific context and refracting and reshaping it to be inserted in another stream of representation. The notion of intertextuality becomes a useful concept for the linguistic anthropological study of media discourse in the context of modernity as it provides us with a tool for exploring the semiotic processes that underlie the way in which the media negotiate and reinscribe the complex relationships of identity that characterize late modern subjecthood.
