Pharmacological Biophysical Agents B:

Clinical Pharmacology of Learning and Memory W.B. Essman, 2012-12-06 The search for drugs to alter learning and memory processes in animals and man has its roots in mythology as well as the history of medicine The use of plant alkaloids to improve memory was a recommendation of Benjamin Rush in his Diseases of the Mind 1812 P 284 and the mysterious contents of lethe a liquid capable of causing the erasure of earthly memories is found in Egyptian and Greek mythology as well as described by Dante remains a still sought amnesic molecule The facilitation of learning or improvement of memory has been claimed for several plant derived substances including coca chat caffeine and nicotine Hypotheses concerning substances found in the brain and their presumed significance for learning or memory led to the development and use of agents that contained such substances For example as observed by William James 1892 P 132 the emphasis in Germany during the 1860 s upon phosphorus in the brain for cognitive functions gave rise to the suggestion that foods vii viii CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY OF LEARNING AND MEMORY high in phosphorus content such as fish were good for brain function Phosphorus containing preparations were advocated for use in cases of poor memory exhaustion etc and though sometimes useful probably were effective due to a non specific stimulant effect Whether the positive cognitive efficacy of non specific CNS stimulants such as phosphorus rosemary lavender cubeb berries etc were really very different from those investigated in animal experiments Lashley 1917 or those documented within recent decades remains to be explored

Rapid advances in knowledge have led to an increasing interest in neuro biology over the last several years These advances have been made possible at least in part by the use of increasingly sophisticated methodology Furthermore research in the most rapidly advancing areas is essentially multidisciplinary and is characterized by contributions from many investigators employing a variety of techniques While a grasp of fundamental neurobiological concepts is an obvious prerequisite for those who wish to follow or participate in this field critical awareness and evaluation of neurobiological research also requires an understanding of sophisticated methodologies The objective of Methods in Neurobiology is the development of such critical abilities The reader is exposed to the basic concepts principles and instrumentation of key methodologies and the application of each methodology is placed in the special context of neurobiological research The reader will gain familiarity with the terminology and procedures of each method and the ability to evaluate results in light of the particular features of neurobiological preparations and applications
