Punt Francis Breyer, 2016-06-21 Francis Breyer's Punt Die Suche nach dem Gottesland covers every aspect concerning Punt, this land known only from ancient Egyptian sources. Several disciplines have contributed to the discussion on its localization: Egyptology, Nubien Studies, Botany, Zoology, Anthropology, and African Studies, among others. The various disciplines' arguments are carefully studied, especially with the history of research and the Zeitgeist in mind. For the very first time, the question is asked which archaeological culture from the horn of Africa can be correlated to the data from the textual and iconographic sources, all of which are collected, translated, and commented on. Breyer not only comprehensively reconstructs the entire organization of the Egyptian expeditions, i.e., participants' routes, trade goods, but also addresses the people of Punt, their cultural background, and way of life.

Media of the Masses Andrew Simon, 2022-04-19 Media of the Masses investigates the social life of an everyday technology, the cassette tape, to offer a multisensory history of modern Egypt. Over the 1970s and 1980s, cassettes became a ubiquitous presence in Egyptian homes and stores. Audiocassette technology gave an opening to ordinary individuals, from singers to smugglers, to challenge state-controlled Egyptian media. Enabling an unprecedented number of people to participate in the creation of culture and circulation of content, cassette players and tapes soon informed broader cultural, political, and economic developments and defined modern Egyptian households. Drawing on a wide array of audio, visual, and textual sources that exist outside the Egyptian National Archives, Andrew Simon provides a new entry point into understanding everyday life and culture. Cassettes and cassette players, he demonstrates, did not simply join other twentieth-century mass media like records and radio; they were the media of the masses. Comprised of little more than magnetic reels in plastic cases, cassettes empowered cultural consumers to become cultural producers long before the advent of the Internet. Positioned at the productive crossroads of social history, cultural anthropology, and media and sound studies, Media of the Masses ultimately shows how the most ordinary things may yield the most surprising insights.

Berenike 1999/2000 Steven E. Sidebotham, Willeke Wendrich, 2007-12-31 Excavations at Berenike, a Greco-Roman harbor on the Egyptian Red Sea coast, have provided extensive evidence for trade with India, South Arabia, and sub-Saharan Africa. The results of the 1999 and 2000 excavations by the joint mission of the University of Delaware, Leiden University, and UCLA have been published in a comprehensive report with specialists' analyses of different object groups and an overview of evidence for the trade route from the Indian perspective. The book is lavishly illustrated with photographs, drawings, plans, and a large foldout map of Berenike and Sikaia.

Cappers,2006-12-31 During the Graeco Roman period Berenike served as a gateway to the outside world together with Myos Hormos Commodities were imported from Africa south of the Sahara Arabia and India into the Greek and Roman Empire the importance of both harbors evidenced by several contemporary sources Between 1994 and 2002 eight excavation seasons were conducted at Berenike by the University of Delaware and Leiden University the Netherlands This book presents the results of the archaeobotanical research of the Roman deposits It is shown that the study of a transit port such as Berenike located at the southeastern fringe of the Roman Empire is highly effective in producing new information on the import of all kinds of luxury items In addition to the huge quantities of black pepper plant remains of more than 60 cultivated plant species could be evidenced several of them for the first time in an archaeobotanical context For each plant species detailed information on its possible origin its use its preservation qualities and the Egyptian subfossil record is provided The interpretation of the cultivated plants including the possibilities of cultivation in Berenike proper is supported by ethnoarchaeobotanical research that has been conducted over the years The reconstruction of the former environment is based on the many wild plant species that were found in Berenike and the study of the present desert vegetation
