Any language can be the societal majority language in one context and the heritage language in another. While the number of empirical studies on language acquisition and processing in heritage language bilingualism has increased in recent years, heritage language bilinguals are an understudied subgroup of bilinguals. When examined as adults, heritage speaker bilinguals tend to show significant differences in their heritage language performance, use, and competence, grammatical knowledge from one another. This variation is particularly unusual because heritage speakers like monolinguals are native speakers of the heritage language.

The Development of Reading Skills Thomas H. Carr, 1985 Focusing on how children learn to read in a language they have previously only spoken, this book illustrates the skill theory of reading development which encompasses both new perceptual processes and modified but familiar integrative cognitive processes of language comprehension. The chapters discuss the following aspects of learning to read: 1 phonemic analysis, spelling, and reading; 2 literacy background and reading development in a second language; 3 knowing words and understanding texts; 4 discourse structure and mental models; 5 the impact of classroom activities on beginning reading development; 6 using component skills analysis to integrate findings on reading development; and 7 bridging the gap between theory and practice in reading. The final chapter lists several journals that publish high quality research on reading and a number of books that provide systematic introduction to the area of reading.
