Risk And Acceptability According To The Social Sciences Mary Douglas Collected Works:

Risk Acceptability According to the Social Sciences Mary Douglas, 1986-05-01 Every day it seems we become aware of some new technological or chemical hazard Yet it is also possible that this very awareness is new or at least newly heightened Why are certain kinds of risks suddenly so salient Are public perceptions of risk simply the sum of individual reactions to individual events or do social and cultural influences play a role in shaping our definitions of safety acceptable risk and danger Prompted by public outcries and by the confusion and uncertainty surrounding risk management policy social scientists have begun to address themselves to the issue of risk perception But as anthropologist Mary Douglas points out they have been singularly reluctant to examine the cultural bases of risk perception preferring to concentrate on the individual perceiver making individual choices This approach leaves unexamined a number of crucial social factors our concepts of what is natural or artificial for example our beliefs about fairness and our moral judgements about the kind of society in which we want to live This provocative and path breaking report seeks to open a sociological approach to risk perception that has so far been systematically neglected Describing first some exceptions to the general neglect of culture Douglas builds on these clues and on her own broad anthropological perspective to make a compelling case for focusing on social factors in risk perception She offers a challenge and a promising new agenda to all who study perceptions of risk and by extension to those who study human cognition and choice as well An altogether brilliant piece of writing far reaching and a joy to read Amartya Sen Oxford University A Volume in the Russell Sage Foundation s Social Science Frontiers Series

Safeguarding the Stranger Jayme R. Reaves, 2016-07-13 What are the resources and teachings in Judaism Christianity and Islam that take hospitality and its call to provide protective hospitality seriously enough to inform shared action and belief on behalf of the threatened other This book argues that protective hospitality and its faith based foundations as seen in the Abrahamic traditions of Judaism Christianity and Islam merit greater theological attention and that the practice of protective hospitality in Christianity can be enhanced by better understandings of Judaism's and Islam's practices of hospitality namely their codes and etiquettes related to honor Safeguarding the Stranger draws especially on two currents in contemporary Christian theologies 1 a contextual and political theological approach informed by liberation and feminist theologies and 2 a cooperative and complementary theological approach informed by interreligious Abrahamic and hospitable approaches to dialogue This book is unique in that it seeks to contribute to academic debates within theology and religious dialogue as well as to discussions within the fields of peace
