Aquatic Mesocosm Studies in Ecological Risk Assessment Robert L. Graney, 2020-10-25 A Special Publication of the Society of Environmental Toxicology and Chemistry SETAC Aquatic Mesocosm Studies in Ecological Risk Assessment discusses the methods currently used for conducting simulated field studies and provides a series of case histories in which mesocosm type studies have been used to assess the impact of pesticides on aquatic ecosystems Specific chapters address the dosing and exposure components of such studies and how they influence experimental design Advantages and disadvantages of various statistical designs are addressed in detail Regulatory aspects of the design and interpretation of these studies are also covered The book will be a superb reference for aquatic biologists ecologists toxicologists environmental toxicologists environmental chemists and regulatory personnel

Antiseptic Stewardship Günter Kampf, 2024-10-30 This updated and expanded second edition of Antiseptic Stewardship serves as a comprehensive reference guide to common biocidal active substances and antiseptic agents examining their antimicrobial efficacy and potential to induce cell tolerance including cross tolerance to other biocidal agents as well as cross resistance to antibiotics In addition the book discusses the appropriate and targeted use of biocidal active substances by balancing their expected health benefits against the likelihood of clinically relevant resistance including misuse and overuse of some products during the COVID 19 pandemic This guide which focuses on human veterinary and household products helps readers make informed decisions about disinfectants and antiseptic products based on their composition Various biocidal active substances and antiseptic agents are used for disinfection and antisepsis in healthcare veterinary medicine animal production and household products However not all of them provide significant health benefits especially for some products used in human medicine Antimicrobial soaps surface disinfectants instrument disinfectants and wound antiseptics may contain one or more biocidal active ingredients with comparable antimicrobial efficacy but with large differences in their potential for microbial adaptation and tolerance Increased bacterial tolerance has been described for several biocidal active substances and antiseptics sometimes including cross resistance to antibiotics The book is therefore intended to help reduce unnecessary selection pressure on emerging pathogens including by describing non biocidal alternatives for specific antimicrobial applications with the aim of retaining the powerful biocidal agents and antiseptics for those applications where there is a clear health benefit e g reduction of healthcare associated infections The book addresses healthcare industrial and veterinary professionals as well as educated laypersons interested in efficient and controlled disinfection strategies

The performance of antimicrobial susceptibility testing programmes relevant to aquaculture and aquacultural products Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2019-10-03 This Circular addresses best practice guidelines for the performance of these susceptibility tests Section 1 discusses the relevance of this document to The FAO Action Plan on Antimicrobial Resistance 2016 2020 Section 2 provides a general background to the principles of antimicrobial susceptibility testing Section 3 discusses the current status of the standard protocols that can be recommended for use in antimicrobial susceptibility testing of bacteria isolated from aquatic animals Following a consideration of 44 species of bacteria that represent those most frequently isolated from aquatic animals it demonstrates that the currently available standardized protocols are adequate for the determination of the antimicrobial susceptibility of 37 of them 84 percent Section 4 discusses the importance of the design of programmes aimed at monitoring or surveillance of antimicrobial resistance associated with the use of antimicrobial agents in the rearing of aquatic animals In this paper four designs are outlined each of which will provide data for programmes aimed at answering different questions Section 5 provides some conclusions while Section 6 gives a list of references The Circular is supported by four annexes that provide i a listing of Clinical and Laboratory Standards Institute CLSI documents cited in the paper ii a list of the antimicrobial agents most commonly used in aquaculture iii notes on the selection of test protocols for selected Gram positive cocci and iv guidance on the possible use of epidemiological cut off values in a clinical context
