

Processing Structures for Perceptions and Action

Barbara L. Fredrickson and Richard E. Petty

Two experiments examined the processing of information that is relevant to the perception of a person's behavior and the subsequent action that is taken. In Experiment 1, participants were exposed to a videotape of a person who was either smiling or frowning. They then watched a videotape of a person who was either smiling or frowning. The results showed that participants who had seen the smiling person in the first videotape were more likely to perceive the person in the second videotape as smiling. In Experiment 2, participants were exposed to a videotape of a person who was either smiling or frowning. They then watched a videotape of a person who was either smiling or frowning. The results showed that participants who had seen the smiling person in the first videotape were more likely to take action to help the person in the second videotape.

Processing Structures For Perception And Action:

Relationships Between Perception and Action Odmar Neumann, Wolfgang Prinz, 2012-12-06 This book is the fruit of a study group on perception and action that worked at the Center for Interdisciplinary Research ZiP of the University of Bielefeld FRG in the academic year 1984 1985 We express our gratitude to the ZiF for hosting the group and for providing financial and organizational support for its scientific activities including a meeting of the authors of the present volume that took place at the ZiF in July 1986 This is the study group's last common product and it took considerable time to give the book its final shape Most of the editing was done while one of us O N was a Fellow at the Netherlands Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities and Social Sciences NIAS during the academic year 1987 1988 Thanks are due to NIAS for its generous support We also thank all our friends and colleagues who contributed to the book Perspectives on Perception and Action Herbert Heuer, Andries Sanders, 2016-07-07 Originally published in 1987 this title aimed to present an eclectic and biased account of the status of perception action relationships in various fields at the time The chapters can be divided into three sections The first focuses on motor control a neglected topic in the past and hence deserving the role of the starting point of this volume In addition motor control provides a good background to discuss the clear sensory and perceptual effects However motor processes are also highly relevant to perception which was usually less emphasized in the literature at the time Therefore a special section is devoted to motor processes in perception together with the issue of integrating information from different sources The book concludes with a section on attention and selection of perceptual information for subsequent action Cognitive Vision Systems Henrik I. Christensen, Hans-Hellmut Nagel, 2006-06-29 This volume is a post event proceedings volume and contains selected papers based on the presentations given and the lively discussions that ensued during a seminar held in Dagstuhl Castle Germany in October 2003 Co sponsored by ECVision the cognitive vision network of excellence it was organized to further strengthen cooperation between research groups from different countries working in the field of cognitive vision systems Hypermedia H.P.
