

PROGRAM DEVELOPMENT AND EVALUATION LIFE CYCLE

EVALUATION ACTIONS

- Determine why the program is necessary. What would all the program address? What will happen if the program does not take place? What factors make the program a priority?
- Identify the gap between what is and what is not needed? What resources already exist to support the program? How will the program results be shared or reported with stakeholders?
- Create a logic model that includes program priorities, inputs, outputs, and anticipated changes in participants' learning, action, and/or life condition.
- What will participants know or be able to do after the program they did not know prior to engaging in the program?

1 PLANNING

- Identify need for educational program
- Establish participant learning objectives
- Identify and describe the target audience
- Define measurable outcomes

2 DESIGNING

- Identify or develop educational content to address program need
- Create educational experiences that align with learning objectives
- Integrate different educational methods that address multiple learning styles
- Determine methods and tools to measure outcomes
- Develop a marketing plan

EVALUATION ACTIONS

- Determine if it is the right time to facilitate the program. Have the program learning objectives been clearly defined? What are they?
- Do the educational experiences and methods exemplify cultural competency?
- Have methods and tools to measure outcomes been determined?
- Has funding been secured? Is there appropriate staffing?
- How will the program and program findings be marketed and reported?
- Is it likely the program can be delivered in the target audience's natural setting? Is there a pool of potential participants available who are interested in the program?

EVALUATION ACTIONS

- Determine what effect the program had on participants. Measure for any changes in participants' learning, action, and/or life condition.
- How does the program either directly or indirectly impact the larger good?
- Measure the efficiency of the program. What is the program's short-term and long-term return on investment?
- Did evaluation results support the measurable outcomes identified in the logic model? Why or why not?

4 MEASURING & REPORTING

- Conduct an evaluation of the entire program to measure outcomes and impact
- Report program results to all stakeholders, including participants
- Conduct a long-term post evaluation to determine if life condition changes occurred (economic, educational, social, etc.)

3 IMPLEMENTING

- Deliver educational content via appropriate educational experiences and methods
- Train others to deliver the program
- Pilot evaluation methods and measurement tools

EVALUATION ACTIONS

- Pilot the program prior to facilitating the program on a larger scale. What were participants' level of program satisfaction? What program changes did participants suggest? Did participants understand the educational content? What evidence is there of participant learning?
- Determine what went as anticipated and what were surprises when delivering the program. Were program staff able to follow the program delivery instructions? Were the selected educational activities appropriate for teaching program content? Did the evaluation tools accurately measure participants' changes in learning, action, and/or life conditions?
