Performance Funding For Public Higher Education:

Financing Public Universities Marcel Herbst, 2007-05-16 Financing Public Universities addresses newer practices of resource allocation which tie funding to indicators of performance. The gist of these efforts is to raise the quality of institutional systems. Performance based budgeting and funding of public universities is part of broader efforts to reform public management and it is being promoted and implemented by various government agencies around the globe. In particular European universities with their normally strong governmental ties or higher education systems molded on European universities are prime targets of such reforms. Performance funding has made its inroads in attempts to grant university systems managerial autonomy; autonomy was to be granted in exchange for funding modes which are tied to the measurement of performance indicators. Unfortunately performance based budgeting or funding measures cannot meet the various expectations; they do not raise the quality of teaching or learning; they do not raise research performance; they take back a great deal of managerial autonomy which is commonly judged to be essential for the well being of higher education institutions; in particular research universities and they act as automata in place of proper governance and management. Financing Public Universities addresses policy makers, higher education administrators, scholars and students of higher education management. After an introduction to the theme and to the book, Chapter 1 Financing Public Universities covers the evolution of mass higher education and the associated curtailment of funding. Chapter 2 the public management reform debate, Chapter 3 within which performance based budgeting or funding evolved, Chapter 4 sketches alternative governance and management modes which can be used instead, Chapter 5 epitomizes inertia or challenges, Chapter 6 Four appendices cover more technical matters such as a comparative exposition of the research performance of universities by nation, Appendix C and examples of funding systems in the UK and in the USA, Appendix D. Performance Funding for Public Higher Education: Views of Critical Stakeholders Andreea M. Serban, Nelson A. Rockefeller Institute of Government, 1997 To develop and disseminate models of performance funding for public colleges and universities.

Performance Funding of Public Higher Education Joseph C. Burke, Andreea M. Serban, 1997 Performance Funding for Public Higher Education Andreea M. Serban, 1997 The Politics of Performance Funding for Higher Education Kevin J. Dougherty, Rebecca S. Natow, 2015-05-15 One of the striking ways in which state governments have pursued better performance in public higher education is through the use of performance funding. Performance funding involves tying state support directly to institutional performance on specific outcomes such as rates of graduation and job placement. The principal rationale for performance funding has been that the introduction of market like forces will prod institutions to become more efficient, delivering more bang for the buck. Kevin Dougherty, an expert on state performance funding, finds its development puzzling. First, despite the great interest in it, only half the states have ever adopted performance funding for higher education. Moreover, of the states that did adopt performance funding, over half later dropped it. Finally, in the states that have retained performance funding over a long period of time their programs have undergone considerable changes in the amount of state funding they devote to performance funding and in the content of the indicators they use to allocate that funding In spite of this performance funding continues to attract interest as a way of improving educational outcomes This book based on an extensive ten state study aims to shed light on the social and political factors affecting the origins evolution and demise of these programs

Performance Funding for Public Higher Education ,1998 Performance Funding for Public Higher Education: Fad or Trend? Joseph C. Burke,Andreea M. Serban,1998-08-13 Performance funding for public higher education has become a popular topic in state capitols in the 1990s The time seemed right for tying resources to results Performance funding represents the most recent step in the search for external accountability and improved performance that started with outcomes assessment and performance reporting The chapters in this volume examine the conflicts and issues raised by performance funding as well as the similarities and differences in state programs They reflect the information gathered and lessons learned from a national study of performance funding supported by The Pew Charitable Trusts This is the 97th issue of the quarterly journal New Directions for Institutional Research

The Politics of Performance Funding for Higher Education Kevin J. Dougherty,Rebecca S. Natow,2015-05-15 The first nation wide analysis of the politics of performance funding in higher education Performance funding ties state support of colleges and universities directly to institutional performance on specific outcomes including retention number of credits accrued graduation and job placement The theory is that introducing market like forces will prod institutions to become more efficient and effective In The Politics of Performance Funding for Higher Education Kevin J Dougherty and Rebecca S Natow explore the sometimes puzzling evolution of this mode of funding higher education Drawing on an eight state study of performance funding in Florida Illinois Indiana Missouri Ohio South Carolina Tennessee and Washington Dougherty and Natow shed light on the social and political factors affecting the origins evolution and demise of these programs Their findings uncover patterns of frequent adoption discontinuation and re adoption Of the thirty six states that have ever adopted performance funding two thirds discontinued it although many of those later re adopted it Even when performance funding programs persist over time they can undergo considerable changes in both the amount of state funding and in the indicators used to allocate funding Yet performance funding continues to attract interest from federal and state officials state policy associations and major foundations as a way of improving educational outcomes The authors explore the various forces actors and motives behind the adoption discontinuation and transformation of performance funding programs They compare U S programs to international models and they gauge the likely future of performance funding given the volatility of the political forces driving it Aimed at educators sociologists political scientists and policy makers this book will be hailed as the definitive assessment of the origins and evolution of performance funding

Performance Funding for Higher Education: What Are the Mechanisms? What Are the Impacts? Kevin J. Dougherty,Vikash Reddy,2013-06-19 After first appearing in 1979 in Tennessee performance funding for higher education went on to be adopted by another 26 states This monograph reviews research on a multitude of states to address these questions What impacts does performance funding have on institutional practices and ultimately student outcomes What obstacles and unintended effects do performance funding encounter This monograph finds considerable impacts on institutional practices weak impacts on student outcomes substantial obstacles and sizable unintended impacts Given this the monograph closes with a discussion of the implications for future research and for public policymaking on performance funding This is the 2nd issue of the 39th volume of the Jossey Bass series ASHE Higher Education Report Each monograph is the definitive analysis of a tough higher education issue based on thorough research of pertinent literature and institutional experiences Topics are identified by a national survey Noted practitioners and scholars are then commissioned to write the reports with experts providing critical reviews of each manuscript before publication

Funding Public Colleges and Universities for Performance Joseph C. Burke, 2002-10-10 This is the first comprehensive study of performance funding of public colleges and universities which directly ties some state allocations to institutional results on designated indicators The book examines performance funding as a national phenomenon identifying the champions and critics of the program the arguments for and against its adoption the most common performance measures used for funding the characteristics that separate stable from unstable initiatives and the inherent possibilities and problems The authors include case studies of performance funding in Tennessee Missouri Florida Ohio and South Carolina and explore the reasons why Arkansas Colorado Kentucky and Minnesota first adopted and later abandoned their programs They examine problems with performance funding such as the reluctance of the academic community to agree on reasonable goals for undergraduate education or the failure to apply performance funding to the academic departments that are mostly responsible for institutional results on many of the performance indicators The contributors conclude that although the future of performance funding remains cloudy one aspect is becoming clear taxpayers are unlikely to continue to accept the proposition that performance should count in all endeavors except state funding for higher education Contributors include E Grady Bogue Joseph C Burke Juan C Copa Patrick Dallet Terri Lessard Gary Moden Dr Robert B Stein Michael Williford and David J Wright

Resources in Education, 1999 The States and Public Higher Education Policy Donald E. Heller, 2011-09-01 Affordability access and accountability have long been among the central challenges facing higher education and they remain so today Here Donald E Heller and other higher education scholars and practitioners explore the current debates surrounding these key issues As students and their families struggle to meet rising tuition prices and as state funding for higher education dwindles policymakers confront issues of affordability within state and institutional budgets Changing demographics and challenges to affirmative action complicate the admissions process even as colleges and universities seek to diversify enrollments And issues of institutional accountability have forced the restructuring of higher education governing boards and a reexamination of the role of public trustees in governance This collection analyzes how issues of affordability access and accountability influence the way in which state governments approach monitor and set public higher education policy The contributors examine the latest research on pressing challenges explore how states are coping with these challenges and consider what the future holds for public postsecondary education in the United States

Constructing "winners and Losers" Denisa Gandara, 2016 In recent years numerous state level policies intended to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of higher education have emerged and in some cases re emerged One such policy that has gained traction in states is performance based funding a method of tying state funding for public higher education institutions directly to institutions performance on pre specified metrics This approach represents a departure from the traditional input based method of allocating state funds to public colleges and universities which has historically relied on enrollment counts Grounded in a theory of policy design that draws attention to the value laden elements of the policy process this study examined performance funding policy design both policy design content and process in two states Colorado and Texas For the analysis this study employed a multiple case study research design and drew on interviews with 34 policy actors over a dozen observations of legislative and state higher education agency proceedings and over 300 documents Findings from this study indicate that performance funding model designs are overwhelmingly a function of higher education institutions self interest particularly in contexts where institutional representatives have substantial authority over the model design process The social construction of certain students e g ethnic minority students as deserving or undeserving of policy benefits also contributes to model designs Finally institutional representatives political power resources are directly associated with the distribution of benefits or burdens to their institution By deconstructing performance funding policy designs to their constituent parts this study focused on how and why given myriad options for performance funding policy designs certain policy elements were chosen instead of others This analysis of designs is especially critical given evidence that costly failures in some instances of performance funding may be attributed to poor design including the use of inappropriate metrics Moreover by drawing on a theory of policy design previously unintroduced to the higher education literature and extending the performance funding research base this study made a number of conceptual and practical contributions including identifying important considerations for performance funding policy evaluations and for funding model design

Burke, Andreea M. Serban, 1997 Performance Funding in Public Higher Education Alexander V. Gorbunov, 2013 New Directions for Educational Research Joseph C. Burke, Andreea M. Serban, 1998 Performance Funding of State Public Higher Education Mark M. Polatajko, 2011 In today s economic climate state public institutions of higher education face challenges on multiple fronts This applies particularly to state funding as it relates to the financing of the mission of the institutions The purpose of this quantitative study was to examine the effectiveness of allocating state resources to state public institutions of higher education by comparing results from performance funding states to non performance funding states The focus was to determine whether the change to the performance funding methodology delivered the desired external accountability and institutional improvement in state public higher education The research question guiding this study was To what extent does the method of funding state public higher education either performance or non performance funding predict the improvement in key higher education performance funding indicators between the years 2002 through 2009 Data collection and analysis investigated the rate of change in key higher education performance funding indicators at state public institutions of higher education in five performance funding states Tennessee Florida Ohio Connecticut and South Carolina in comparison to five states that do not employ performance

funding Michigan Georgia Arizona Massachusetts and Maryland The general hypothesis tested was State public institutions of higher education in states that employ a performance funding methodology will experience a statistically significant increase in performance funding indicators that is greater than in states that employ a non performance funding methodology Data were analyzed using the Hierarchical Linear Model HLM with a focus on individual change over time The findings revealed that method of funding was not a statistically significant predictor of either the initial status or the rate of change of graduation rate or retention rate over the eight year period although institution type and enrollment were The study recommends further research of performance funding outcomes state funding levels and other environmental factors
