, 2003 Reference and Information Services Richard E. Bopp, Linda C. Smith, 2001 Thoroughly revised and expanded to reflect current developments in the field this text is designed to provide the beginning student of library and information science with an overview of the most important tools for general reference work and the concepts and theory behind today's reference services The 21 chapters are divided into two parts The first 11 chapters deal with concepts and theory and are topical They cover such areas as ethical aspects of reference services reference interview the principles and goals of library instruction bibliographic control and search strategies training and continuing education for reference staff the evaluation of reference services and the management of these services In many cases specific applications in different types of libraries are pointed out Expanded coverage of electronic reference service is provided by two full chapters devoted to basic principles and current trends in this area A separate chapter covers unique approaches to reference service for special groups Part 2 describes the general principles and sources for selecting and evaluating reference tools and the principles for building a reference collection The remaining chapters discuss the characteristics and uses of particular types of reference tools This new edition describes a greater number of titles of each type as well as the formulation of strategies for the effective use of specific sources or groups of sources Scenarios in particular library settings conclude each chapter offering realistic reference questions and appropriate search strategies Throughout the text boxes are used to highlight specific issues concepts and search strategies that underlie contemporary reference services Selected important sources for further reading are listed at the end of each chapter This text presents the essential theory and practical knowledge necessary for an initial reference course Its broad scope and organizational clarity should benefit students and practitioners alike Journal and Taxes Roger G. Noll, Andrew Zimbalist, 1997-10-01 America is in the midst of a sports building boom Professional sports teams are demanding and receiving fancy new playing facilities that are heavily subsidized by government In many cases the rationale given for these subsidies is that attracting or retaining a professional sports franchise even a minor league baseball team or a major league pre season training facility more than pays for itself in increased tax revenues local economic development and job creation But are these claims true To assess the case for subsidies this book examines the economic impact of new stadiums and the presence of a sports franchise on the local economy It first explores such general issues as the appropriate method for measuring economic benefits and costs the source of the bargaining power of teams in obtaining subsidies from local government the local politics of attracting and retaining teams the relationship between sports and local employment and the importance of stadium design in influencing the economic impact of a facility The second part of the book contains case studies of major league sports facilities in Baltimore Chicago Cincinnati Cleveland Indianapolis San Francisco and the Twin Cities and of minor league stadiums and spring training facilities in baseball The primary conclusions are first sports teams and facilities are not a source of local economic growth and employment second the magnitude of the net subsidy exceeds the financial benefit of a new stadium to a team and third the most plausible reasons that cities are willing to subsidize sports teams are the intense popularity of sports among a substantial proportion of voters and businesses and the leverage that teams enjoy from the monopoly position of professional sports leagues
