Making and Unmaking of East-West Link James C Murphy, 2022-07-05 Melbourne's aborted East West Link the massive multi billion dollar inner city toll road project that promised to knit Melbourne closer together was divisive from the start Intense picketing and protests multiple court challenges breathless media coverage and bitter politicking consumed the Victorian parliament for years The link brought the downfall of the single term Baillieu Napthine Liberal government its cancellation cost the state half a billion dollars and it lives on in infamy a byword for brinkmanship waste and politicisation of infrastructure But where did this notorious megaproject come from and what explains its fate Was it a project hand picked by state premiers who miscalculated its electoral value Was it foisted on the government by cunning roads bureaucrats unprepared for the public backlash Or was it simply that opponents of the project succeeded by turning it into an election issue James C Murphy explores the saga from competing vantage points detailing the layers of politics that saturate infrastructure policymaking in Australia

Francis de Groot Andrew Moore, 2005 Saturday 19 March 1932 the day of the opening of the Sydney Harbour Bridge one of the most significant occasions in the history of the city of Sydney The public mood however was apprehensive more than it was festive As one senior journalist later reflected the city was jumpy jumpy as I've never known it since For one thing the leader of the right wing New Guard had vowed that Premier Lang would not open the Bridge The police and security authorities were concerned that the New Guard might kidnap the premier and stage a coup d'etat All eyes scanned the horizon awaiting the approach of an angry right wing mob Into these confused and tense circumstances rode a lone horseman wielding an ex cavalry sword He was Captain Francis De Groot a former Hussar and Irishman also a senior member of the New Guard Slashing the ribbon with his sword he declared the Sydney Harbour Bridge open in the name of the decent and respectable people of New South Wales Relying upon hitherto unused archival material as well as manuscripts found in Ireland Andrew Moore tells the story of the Bridge opening in all its colourful detail This sheds fresh light on the bizarre circumstances that had brought New South Wales to the brink of civil war Irish Fascist Australian Legend is also the first biography to be published of Francis De Groot The handsome enigmatic Irishman grew up in Dublin a member of an elite Irish Huguenot family Prior to World War One he worked as a merchant seaman coal lumper and antique dealer After serving on the Western Front he returned to Sydney to manufacture reproduction furniture of the finest quality Captain De Groot became part of Australian folklore for his part in the Harbour Bridge opening Yet through furniture and antiques his contribution to the cultural life of his adopted city and country was as profound as his celebrated role in opening Sydney's famous Coathanger Shortlisted for THE STATE RECORDS NSW JOHN AND PATRICIA WARD HISTORY PRIZE 2006 New South Wales Premier's History Awards A NSW Sesquicentenary of Responsible Government publication

The Myth of the Great Depression David Potts, 2009-03-02 Tradition has it that the Great Depression of the 1930s swept through Australia like a raging flood tearing up the garden of the 1920s and imposing terrible suffering on the population at large In measures used at the time unemployment peaked in 1932 at 29 per cent and rates of bankruptcy doubled Ever since popular images of impacts have included men and women evicted onto the streets eating out of dustbins queuing for the dole living in humpies and tramping the countryside in search of work When David Potts began teaching history at the University of Melbourne in 1965 he ran a program for students to interview anyone who remembered the period Many of the respondents recalled painful experiences as he anticipated But others spoke of the early 1930s with affection They said that they had coped well that the Depression gave life meaning and that people were happier then Surprised by these comments Potts went to contemporary sources to disprove what he saw as romanticism However despite reports in the daily press about increased malnutrition and homelessness there was evidence overall that health improved and death rates declined Suicide rates after a sharp rise in 1930 kept falling as the Depression deepened though the press still carried many stories of people killing themselves because of the Depression Potts wondered how these apparent contradictions might be explained After his students interviewed 1 200 Depression survivors and Potts himself trawled through many first person accounts it became evident that adverse impacts of the depression had been over emphasised that good things occurred in the 1930s which the Depression itself did not undermine and to which it might even have contributed What Potts discovered has led to this thorough and lively social history of the early 1930s that covers not just the usual stories of suffering but extends into compelling tales of resilience and happiness even among people who were poor and unemployed Heritage, Labour and the Working Classes Laura Jane Smith, Paul Shackel, Gary Campbell, 2012-05-23

 Heritage Labour and the Working Classes is both a celebration and commemoration of working class culture. It contains sometimes inspiring accounts of working class communities and people telling their own stories and weaves together examples of tangible and intangible heritage: place, history, memory, music and literature. Rather than being framed in a social inclusion framework which sees working class culture as a deficit, this book addresses the question: What is labour and working class heritage? How does it differ or stand in opposition to dominant ways of understanding heritage and history and in what ways is it used as a contemporary resource? It also explores how heritage is used in working class communities and by labour organizations and considers what meanings and significance this heritage may have while also identifying how and why communities and their heritage have been excluded. Drawing on new scholarship in heritage studies, social memory, the public history of labour and new working class studies, this volume highlights the heritage of working people, communities and organizations. Contributions are drawn from a number of Western countries including the USA, UK, Spain, Sweden, Australia and New Zealand and from a range of disciplines including heritage and museum studies, history, sociology, politics, archaeology and anthropology. Heritage Labour and the Working Classes represents an innovative and useful resource for heritage and museum practitioners, students and academics concerned with understanding community heritage and the debate on social inclusion/exclusion. It offers new ways of understanding heritage, its values and consequences, and presents a challenge to dominant and traditional frameworks for understanding and identifying heritage and heritage making.

Update, 2001 Sounds Australian, 2001 Monthly Journal - Amalgamated Metal Workers' Union Amalgamated Metal Workers' Union, 1971 Perfect Beat, 2000 Quality Schooling David N. Aspin, Judith D. Chapman, Vernon R. Wilkinson, 1994. Quality is one of the key terms in the current educational debate. In schools, education systems and institutions, no one is against quality. Everyone wants to be assured that her or she will obtain it, but what is it and how do schools know when they have found it or failed to find it? What measures need to be introduced to promote it and in ways that do not threaten or compromise other good things in our education and social systems? This book looks at these questions and examines international reform initiatives with particular emphasis on the experiences of OECD countries. It aims to provide access to a range of problems, issues and trends which will enhance the understanding of policy makers, administrators, teachers and parents as they address the theme of quality schooling in their schools and school systems around the world. The authors take a problem-based approach founded on a substantial piece of empirical analytic work which examines conceptions of education quality, the role of the school in recent proposals for enhancing quality and the broad development of centralized education policy designed to bring about quality in schools and school systems. A Guide to Australian Folklore Gwenda Davey, Graham Seal, 2003.
