Improving Working Memory in Learning and Intellectual Disabilities

Silvia Lanfranchi,Barbara Carretti,2016-08-05 The last forty years of research have demonstrated that working memory WM is a key concept for understanding higher order cognition To give an example WM is involved in reading comprehension problem solving and reasoning but also in a number of everyday life activities It has a clear role in the case of atypical development too For instance numerous studies have shown an impairment in WM in individuals with learning disabilities LD or intellectual disabilities ID and several researchers have hypothesized that this can be linked to their difficulties in learning cognition and everyday life The latest challenge in the field concerns the trainability of WM If it is a construct central to our understanding of cognition in typical and atypical development then specific intervention to sustain WM performance might also promote changes in cognitive processes associated with WM The idea that WM can be modified is debated however partly because of the theoretical implications of this view and partly due to the generally contradictory results obtained so far In fact most studies converge in demonstrating specific effects of WM training i e improvements in the trained tasks but few transfer effects to allied cognitive processes are generally reported It is worth noting that any maintenance effects when investigated are even more meagre In addition a number of methodological concerns have been raised in relation to the use of 1 single tasks to assess the effects of a training program 2 WM tasks differing from those used in the training to assess the effects of WM training and 3 passive control groups These and other crucial issues have so far prevented any conclusions from being drawn on the efficacy of WM training Bearing in mind that the opportunity to train WM could have a huge impact in the educational and clinical settings it seems fundamentally important to shed more light on the limits and potential of this line of research The aim of the research discussed here is to generate new evidence on the feasibility of training WM in individuals with LD and ID There are several questions that could be raised in this field For a start can WM be trained in this population Are there some aspects of WM that can be trained more easily than others Can a WM training reduce the impact of LD and ID on learning outcomes and on everyday living What kind of training program is best suited to the promotion of such changes

Effects of Rating Format and Rater Training on Performance Rating Accuracy and the Motivation to Rate Accurately Robert Lloyd Heneman, 1984 Training for Quality Ann S. Epstein, 1993 The Training of Trainers ToT

Evaluation investigated the efficacy of the High Scope model for improving the quality of early childhood programs on a national scale To address this question the High Scope Foundation undertook a multimethod evaluation that collected anecdotal records from the consultants and 793 participants in 40 ToT projects surveyed a random sample of 203 endorsed trainers around the country interviewed and observed highly qualified teachers in 244 High Scope and 122 non High Scope settings and assessed 97 children in High Scope and 103 in comparison programs In addition to the particular question about High Scope s effectiveness in doing training the study also addressed broader questions about the role of inservice training in improving early childhood program quality and enhancing young children s development Some of the results of the study include the following 1 High Scope training is effective and evidence indicated that inservice training contributes significantly to program quality and children s development 2 although both High Scope and comparison settings offered high quality programs there were significant differences High Scope programs were better than comparison programs at organizing the environment encouraging independent thought and action and using adult child interaction to promote reasoning and language skills 3 teachers formal education inservice training and experience were all significant predictors of program quality Contains 56 references TJQ

Wasserman, Scott Lawrence DeVore, 2002 The past few years have seen an upsurge in the numbers of known Neolithic settlements in Ireland Many of these sites have been excavated by archaeologists based in field units but few are well known to the wider archaeological community The papers in this volume were presented at a conference held at Queen s University

Belfast in 2001 which provided a forum for a discussion of the new Neolithic material from Ireland in its wider geographical context. Although the bulk of the emerging Irish settlement evidence relates to substantial houses, many of these papers consider wider themes including issues of contact and communication along the sea routes and coastal margins of north west Europe, questions of diversity and regional patterns of sedentism and mobility and variations in regional food production strategies.
