Excerpt from book CHAPTER III CARD TRICKS INVOLVING SLEIGHT OF HAND In the last chapter a class of card tricks was described in which a knowledge of sleight of hand was not necessary although it was suggested that even the simpler illusions of the card conjurer's art are enhanced by the judicious employment of the more or less familiar sleights The feats described in this chapter demand a knowledge of sleight of hand and practiced dexterity The author assumes that the reader is familiar with the various passes palms forces changes false shuffles and other practical sleights that form the anatomy of card magic As there are so many excellent works that exhaustively treat of this subject it would be a wrongful use of space to include descriptions of sleights familiar to the majority of readers We should advise a careful study of Sach's Sleight of Hand and Professor Hoffman's admirable treatises on the art of magic including his translation of Robert Houdin's Secrets of Conjuring and Magic which is at once a grammar and a dictionary of the fascinating art of deception Without any further preliminary remarks let us proceed with our description of actual tricks choosing for the first number an effective sleight of hand experiment originated by the author of this book Let us call it THE TRANSFIXED PACK This is essentially an impromptu card trick as any pack of cards may be used and no preparation is necessary Invested with appropriate patter it is not beneath the dignity of the professional wizard Effect Two cards are selected from a shuffled pack returned to the deck which is again shuffled by the spectators The pack is now wrapped in a sheet of paper and the packet held securely by a rubber band The performer thrusts a paper knife through the packet of car
