forests Countries that are undergoing rapid economic growth tend to struggle with immense pressures on their forests In contrast regions that have already achieved a high level of economic development are usually able to stabilize or increase their forest area However the factors affecting forests are numerous and complex making it difficult to draw simple conclusions or to make reliable projections Part Two considers how forestry will have to adapt for the future It begins with a global outlook for wood products demand to 2030 noting changing patterns in production consumption and trade Next a chapter on environmental services of forests probes the various market and non market mechanisms evolving to help forests and trees fulfill their environmental service functions of land water and biodiversity protection carbon storage and others A look at progress in institutional adaptation notes that many forestry institutions are having difficulty in adapting to rapid changes in communications globalisation and society s expectations Those institutions that are willing and able to adapt are more likely to be successful in the future Finally Part Two examines developments in science and technology which will continue to have an enormous impact on the future of forests and forestry Imagine a world in which trees are a major source of fuel for cars replacing oil Only a few years ago this seemed like fantasy but today the possibility must be seriously considered
