Services And Uneven Development:

Service Worlds John Bryson, Peter Daniels, Barney Warf, 2013-04-15 As the twenty first century begins significant changes are occurring in the way that services and goods are produced and consumed One of the key drivers of this change is information and communications technology ICT It has transformed the role of space and time in patterns of economic development in the rise of globalization and in the scale and structure of organizations ICT has therefore accelerated the process of continual change and evolution that is the hallmark of both the capitalist economy and of organizations Giving a student friendly account of the diversity of theoretical perspectives this outstanding book aids understanding the evolving economic geography of advanced capitalist economies A series of detailed firm and employees case studies from Europe North America and the Asia Pacific are used to inform useful theoretical case studies which also investigate the significance of increased blurring of the lines between services and manufacturing functions in the production and consumption process

Development Riccardo Cappellin, Peter Nijkamp, 1990 Environment & Planning, 1998-07 Japanese Multinationals in the Changing Context of Regional Policy Man-Hee Han, 1994 This study aims to connect the changes in the geography of selected countries with the movement of international market forces and the changing world economy The author explores the worldwide managerial strategy of Japanese multinational companies through their location decisions Services and Uneven Development J. N. Marshall, 1988 Service industries are playing an increasingly important part in the national economy of advanced industrial nations Surveying their development in Britain from a geographical perspective this book assesses the location of new service industries their impact on local employment opportunities and their contribution to other sectors of the economy Challenging the Growth Machine Barbara Ferman, 1996 Economic development and urban growth are the contested grounds of urban politics Business elites and politicians tend to forge pro growth coalitions centered around downtown development while progressive and neighborhood activists counter with a more balanced approach that features a strong neighborhood component Urban politics is often shaped by this conflict which has intellectual as well as practical dimensions In some cities neighborhood interests have triumphed in others the pro growth agenda has prevailed In this illuminating comparative study Barbara Ferman demonstrates why neighborhood challenges to pro growth politics were much more successful in Pittsburgh than they were in Chicago Operating largely in the civic arena Pittsburgh's neighborhood groups encountered a political culture and institutional structure conducive to empowering neighborhood progressivism in housing and economic development policymaking In contrast the pro growth agenda in Chicago was challenged in the electoral arena which was dominated by machine ward based politicians who regarded any independent neighborhood organizing as a threat Consequently neighborhood demands for policymaking input were usually thwarted Besides revealing why the development policies of two important American cities diverged Ferman's unique comparative approach to this issue significantly expands the scope of urban analysis Among other things it provides the first serious study to incorporate the civic sector neighborhood politics as an important component of urban regimes Ferman also emphasizes institutional and cultural factors often ignored or relegated to residual roles in other studies and expounds on their influence in shaping local politics and policy To add an analytical and normative dimension to urban analysis she focuses on the non elite actors not just the economic and political elites who compose governing coalitions Ultimately Ferman takes a more holistic and balanced view of large cities than is typical for urban studies as she argues that neighborhoods are an important integral part of what cities are and can be For that reason especially her work will have a profound impact upon our understanding of urban politics Environment & Planning A., 1995-07 Producer Services in Cities of the Asia Pacific Economic Region Morshidi Sirat, Abdul Fatah Che Hamat, Nooriah Yusof, 2001 Much attention has been given recently to the role and contribution of producer services in advanced economies In most of these economies producer services account for no less than 50 percent of employment in metropolitan areas Evidently the increase in the share of producer services in all employment has been well documented for Europe and for North America In so far as the Asia Pacific economic region is concerned there is a similar pattern of growth and development although this is only based on employment in finance insurance real estate and business services Producer services represent one of the key new growth sectors but in the context of the Asia Pacific economic region empirical work about how producer services are participating in and shaping the process of development remains to be undertaken In the case of many developing countries in the Asia Pacific economic region grouping producer services are heavily represented in urban and metropolitan areas which are more developed and functionally diverse However the role and contribution of producer services in the highest of the urban hierarchy in the developing countries of the region has not been examined adequately The study reported in this book is also based on various debates concerning the interurban location of producer service activities The overwhelming importance of face to face contact in both the acquisition of inputs and the delivery of the product to clients results in agglomeration economies maximizing and transaction cost minimizing in corporate activity complexes traditionally located in the CBD
