Science with Theology in Christendom Andrew Dickson White, 1896-01-01 Among those masses of cathedral sculpture which preserve so much of medieval theology one frequently recurring group is noteworthy for its presentment of a time honoured doctrine regarding the origin of the universe The Almighty in human form sits benignly making the sun moon and stars and hanging them from the solid firmament which supports the heaven above and overarches the earth beneath The furrows of thought on the Creator's brow show that in this work he is obliged to contrive the knotted muscles upon his arms show that he is obliged to toil naturally then the sculptors and painters of the medieval and early modern period frequently represented him as the writers whose conceptions they embodied had done as on the seventh day weary after thought and toil enjoying well earned repose and the plaudits of the hosts of heaven In these thought fossils of the cathedrals and in other revelations of the same idea through sculpture painting glass staining mosaic work and engraving during the Middle Ages and the two centuries following culminated a belief which had been developed through thousands of years and which has determined the world's thought until our own time Its beginnings lie far back in human history we find them among the early records of nearly all the great civilizations and they hold a most prominent place in the various sacred books of the world In nearly all of them is revealed the conception of a Creator of whom man is an imperfect image and who literally and directly created the visible universe with his hands and fingers Among these theories of especial interest to us are those which controlled theological thought in Chaldea The Assyrian inscriptions which have been recently recovered and given to the English speaking peoples by Layard George Smith Sayce and others show that in the ancient religions of Chaldea and Babylonia there was elaborated a narrative of the creation which in its most important features must have been the source of that in our own sacred books It has now become perfectly clear that from the same sources which inspired the accounts of the creation of the universe among the Chaldeo Babylonian the Assyrian the Phoenician and other ancient civilizations came the ideas which hold so prominent a place in the sacred books of the Hebrews In the two accounts imperfectly fused together in Genesis and also in the account of which we have indications in the book of Job and in the Proverbs there is presented often with the greatest sublimity the same early conception of the Creator and of the creation the conception so natural in the childhood of civilization of a Creator who is an enlarged human being working literally with his own hands and of a creation which is the work of his fingers To supplement this view there was developed the belief in this Creator as one who having from his ample palm Launched forth the rolling planets into space sits on high enthroned upon the circle of the heavens perpetually controlling and directing them A History of the warfare of science with theology in
