Schools For Thought A Science Of Learning In The Classroom:

Schools for Thought John T. Bruer, 1994 Schools for Thought provides a straightforward general introduction to cognitive research and illustrates its importance for educational change If we want to improve educational opportunities and outcomes for all children we must start applying what we know about mental functioning how children think learn and remember in our schools We must apply cognitive science in the classroom Schools for Thought provides a straightforward general introduction to cognitive research and illustrates its importance for educational change Using classroom examples Bruer shows how applying cognitive research can dramatically improve students transitions from lower level rote skills to advanced proficiency in reading writing mathematics and science Cognitive research he points out is also beginning to suggest how we might better motivate students design more effective tools for assessing them and improve the training of teachers He concludes with a chapter on how effective school reform demands that we expand our understanding of teaching and learning and that we think about education in new ways Debates and discussions about the reform of American education suffer from a lack of appreciation of the complexity of learning and from a lack of understanding about the knowledge base that is available for the improvement of educational practice Politicians business leaders and even many school superintendents principals and teachers think that educational problems can be solved by changing school management structures or by creating a market in educational services Bruer argues that improvement depends instead on changing student teacher interactions It is these changes guided by cognitive research that will create more effective classroom environments A Bradford Book School Education ,1884 Lectures on the Science and Art of Education Joseph Payne, 1880 Contributions from Science Education Research European Science Education Research Association.
