History of the principal pearl banks* Sir William Abbott Herdman, 1904 Chamber's Journal of Popular Literature, Science and Arts ,1878 In vitro Pearl Culture Techniques: A Biotechnological Approach Dr. C.P. Suja, A. Gopalakrishnan, 2018-05-14 Document from the year 2018 in the subject Biology Genetics Gene Technology language English abstract Different pearl producing mollusks have been selected for the experiment The mantle tissue which is responsible for the pearl or nacre formation is excised off in sterile conditions from the animal and utilized for culture This tissue is again cut into small pieces called explants for inoculating in the media The preparation of test animals sterilization of tissue in antibiotic solutions before inoculation is done as explained earlier Media M199 mixed in agar is used for seeding the nucleus or shell beads The nucleus or beads are also sterilized before inoculation Three nuclei have inoculated in each T25 culture flasks Explant is inoculated on one side of the bead Cells are started to proliferate from the explants from day 1 onwards The proliferated cells spread around and over the bead and a pearl sac of epithelial cells is formed The semi solid medium provided better substratum for outgrowth of explants over beads Thick mass of cells is seen to form growth process like structures from all sides of the bead The cells started secreting crystals and a nacreous layer is formed over the bead The crystals are analyzed through scanning electron microscope studies CaCO₃ crystals are proved through SEM studies in both pearl oyster and abalone A complete lustrous pearl can be formed through more layers of coating over the bead Similar experiments are conducted in other mollusks like green mussel Pteria sp and window pane oyster The formation of pearl sac and the formation of crystals are noticed over the bead in these mollusks also The present study is taken up to develop the technology on in vitro pearl production by understanding the aspects on cell behavior in pearl sac formation The investigation will form as a stepping stone for advanced research on in vitro pearl production in all mollusks and thus can revive the pearl culture
