Eisele,2000 The evaluation of the impacts of Intelligent Transportation System ITS treatments is at an early but important stage The national level focus on a few good measures provides a standard systematic method for understanding a variety of programs and projects This report presents an expanded process and measures for considering the effect of ITS investments A series of questions are proposed to bring out the potential effects of ITS programs that may not be analyzed due to relatively little data or complex relationships This particularly relates to subject areas unfamiliar to the public sector transport agencies that typically are in charge of ITS deployment These groups have little experience with logistics supply chains or business restructuring concepts The report also recommends expanding one goal and adding another It suggests that local goals be identified and studied as a way of exploring important attributes and developing future plans The important factors might be better analyzed and incorporated with a multi criteria analysis approach rather than the traditional benefit cost analysis This approach will also allow the local concerns to be addressed in a more customized process and produce the statistics needed to compare local projects with national standards and results The Problem of Chemical and Biological Warfare: The prevention of CBW, by A.
