Sheltered Housing For The Elderly Policy Practice And The Consumer:

Sheltered Housing for the Elderly Alan Butler, Christine Oldman, John Greve, 2021-11-07 In the early 1980s the ten million people of retirement age in the UK figured prominently among the disadvantaged and deprived They were heavily over represented in sub standard housing and among those in most need of support from the personal social services One form of social provision which gained rapidly in popularity in the 1960s and 1970s was sheltered housing It was seen to combine housing with care provided support while fostering independence and gave scope for flexibility and experimentation in adapting schemes to local circumstances By the late 1970s hundreds of schemes were administered and they were occupied by half a million elderly tenants Sheltered housing was called the greatest breakthrough in the housing scene since the war Extravagant expectations were aroused and sheltered housing was regarded by some as the solution to all manner of complex problems Taking the country as a whole however relatively little was known about the numbers of schemes and where they were located who owned them and how they were managed the aims and assumptions of those who provided or advocated sheltered housing how the schemes functioned and whether they achieved what they were set up to do the role experience and attitudes of wardens what kinds of people lived in sheltered housing their history and how they became tenants their assessment of the scheme and much else The Leeds study on which this book is based originally published in 1983 was the most comprehensive and detailed to have been conducted into sheltered housing It evoked widespread interest in Britain and abroad at the time It sought to answer some of the important questions about the growth and proliferation of sheltered housing to evaluate sheltered housing from different points of view including those of tenants and to consider the scope for future development While sheltered housing is the focal topic of the book it should be viewed in the broader context of social policy administration professional practice and client experience The book describes in detail an innovative and evolving form of social provision and in doing so illuminates the operation and impact of policy in action at several levels from the policy maker to the consumer from the organisation of policy to its object There was significant evidence from the study that many tenants were provided with a service which was not the one they sought or even needed but they were given what the agency happened to have or made available Among other topics the book examines sheltered housing as a response to or reflection of myths and prejudices about ageing It discusses whether elderly people should be compelled to move from familiar surroundings late in life and how they cope when they do move The usefulness or otherwise of alarm systems is assessed with conclusions that throw considerable doubt on their value or reliability The evolution and modifications taking place in sheltered housing are reported on and the scope for future initiatives is discussed Independence and the Elderly Malcolm J. Fisk, 2024-05-10 In the 1980s much research into the needs of the elderly was undertaken from the perspective of a sickness model a model which reinforced labels of elderly people as frail disabled dependent and economically unproductive Few studies adopted a positive attitude to ageing and elderly people Originally published in 1986 reissued here with a new preface this book helped to redress this imbalance by focusing on the theme of independence examined particularly from the perspective of current housing and social policies relating to elderly people at the time The author looks at sheltered housing in detail including discussion of alarm systems staying put schemes and residential homes The book was essential reading for academics and practitioners in the health and social welfare fields with a concern for the elderly and the ways in which they could retain a meaningful independence Social Gerontology Silvana di Gregorio,2024-05-10

Originally published in 1987 Social Gerontology presents papers from the British Society of Gerontology annual conference held at the University of Glasgow in September 1986 It shows much of the most innovative research and thinking in social gerontology and will interest a wide range of academics and professionals in the social and health sciences and services interested in gerontology and the welfare of elderly people Personal Response Systems Andrew S Dibner,2020-03-12

This important new book describes the origins developments and current status of personal response systems a new means for persons at risk who live alone to get help in case of emergency In Personal Response Systems experts from ten countries report on the status achievements and challenges involved in setting up distributing and operating personal response systems PRS Experienced authors from a variety of backgrounds describe the technology economics and social effects of PRS and its integration into existing health and housing programs Professionals who provide home health services will find important information about the most efficient and cost effective designs of personal response systems They will learn how to evaluate and recommend the most appropriate systems for their clients with the assistance of this valuable new book Research on the frequency and types of emergencies and the many psychological and social benefits to users of this new technology and their families are also discussed Personal Response Systems covers systems in a number of countries including Japan Israel Sweden New Zealand and Germany Authors representing universities social agencies and manufacturing plants provide a balanced thorough presentation of the subject These authors discuss the technology of personal response systems demographic trends how to set up a PRS in a community the integration of PRS into housing for the elderly and disabled benefits to consumers and health care systems the effects of PRS on family relationships emergencies best suited for PRS analysis of how future technology will expand the medical and protective functions of PRS Health care planners social workers physicians case managers housing developers and managers and others involved in caring for the elderly or disabled will find a valuable store of information in this comprehensive volume They will be able to evaluate more quickly the most appropriate PRS services for their clients and tenants Residential Care Transformed J.

Johnson,S. Rolph,R. Smith,2010-05-28 This book now in paperback revisits Peter Townsend s classic study of residential care for older people in Britain conducted in the late 1950s It provides not only a fascinating account of residential care for older people over the last 50 years but is also an important contribution to the literature on research methods Older People in Modern Society Anthea Tinker,2014-10-13 Older People in Modern Society is an established classic text in its field and through subsequent editions its reputation and that of its author has grown In this fourth and renamed edition Anthea Tinker synthesises and discusses a wide range of literature about older people drawing from fields such as medicine sociology and social policy and using primary source material to illustrate the text She also introduces a number of topics that have attained greater importance since publication of the third edition in 1992 for example continuing care and the abuse of older people

Housing for the Elderly Francis Weal, Francesca Weal, 1988 Housing Policy in Britain Tony Newson, Philip Potter, 1985 Staying at Home, Helping Elderly People Anthea Tinker, 1984 An Evaluation of Very Sheltered Housing Anthea Tinker, Great Britain. Department of the Environment, 1989 Very sheltered housing is the latest in a long line of special housing for elderly people Like many new initiatives it evolved from experiments in different parts of the country but up until now no evaluation of these innovative schemes had taken place This research a national survey followed by case studies of ten local authorities and ten housing associations was intended to find out whether very sheltered housing was a cost effective option for frail elderly people and one which they wanted With the expected growth in the number of very elderly people it is important to consider all new forms of housing provision

Residential Care for the Elderly Sharon Baggett, 1989-09-25 Although residential care and assisted living for older adults has expanded rapidly in recent decades it has done so in a policy environment beset by confusion and conflicting purposes Sharon A Baggett traces many of the current problems to insufficient knowledge of the population these policies are designed to serve In her examination of the frequently neglected interface between policy and people she provides a comprehensive review of current federal and state policies a detailed case study of a state residential care program and an analysis of the needs and characteristics of persons in assisted living facilities Baggett s policy overview covers such areas as the confusion between housing and care supply and demand factors in the economics of residential care conditions contributing to the increase in numbers of assisted living facilities and current policies that define and limit the choice of residential alternatives A case study of Oregon s residential care program shows how that state has adapted federal initiatives to local goals and philosophies of long term care Funding mechanisms regulations and the role of state agencies in developing and monitoring compliance are discussed Following a comprehensive profile of facility residents the question of using functional assessment measures to determine individual needs is explored Linking the larger policy issues with an in depth analysis of residents served and actual services provided this book will be helpful to policy planners and developers administrators and case managers as well as students and academics concerned with housing and assisted living services for the elderly

Archives of Gerontology and Geriatrics , 1991 Care for the Elderly Robbert J. Kraan, 1991 The Disability and Chronic Disease Quarterly , 1984 The Experience of Housing in Retirement Gwyndaf Williams, 1990 Living Independently Paul McCafferty, 1994 This report sets out the main findings of a programme of research commissioned by the Department of the Environment In order to address the objectives set out for the report the study sought answers to four key questions what is the current provision of subsidized housing and housing with care provision for elderly people what are the most cost effective forms of subsidized housing and housing with care provision for elderly people what are the current housing and care characteristics and circumstances of elderly and disabled people at both national and regional levels and what are the best estimates and indicators of need by elderly and disabled people for subsidized housing and housing with care provision for planning local housing strategies Elderly People in Modern Society Anthea Tinker, 1992 This series provides students of social administration and social work with informative guides to the major areas of social policy beginning of their courses Western societies have become more aware of the fact that we are an ageing society with fewer babies being born and more people surviving into old age This book offers an account of the present situation and analyzes some of the problems and options for the future coverage of the subject taking into account a wide range of literature from medicine architecture sociology psychology and social policy No previous knowledge is assumed the social sciences medicine nursing social work law and geography It should also stimulate interest among many professions voluntary bodies and the general public Councils of Care Alan Norton, Bryan Stoten, Hedley Taylor, 1986 Council of care is the report of a review of local government policies undertaken jointly by the Centre for Policy on Ageing and the Institute of Local Government Studies It outlines the most important areas of current practice highlights initiatives that could provide a model and provides an informed basis for discussion of policy and decision making in the immediate future The first section of the report examines the implications of the crisis in the welfare state and considers the pursuit of cost effectiveness in local government The second part concentrates on how local councils can maintain and improve the quality of life of retired people by ensuring that transport planning leisure and the police service are sensitive to their needs and limitations Two chapters on housing review the case for and against sheltered housing the role of the private sector staying put options and the need for surveillance Part three considers the services required by the frail elderly and reviews the community care debate and developments in home help meals services day care residential care social work support and some of the innovative alternatives The final section considers the crucial issue of co ordination between local government departments and between local government and other agencies Only by close collaboration and effective strategic planning can retired people be served in such a way as to ensure the best use of scarce resources 4e de couv
