Shadowed Pages:

Security and Persistence John Rosenberg, J. Leslie Keedy, 2012-12-06 During a short visit to Bremen in December 1989 John Rosenberg had several discussions with me about computer architecture. Although we had previously worked together for more than a decade in Australia, we had not seen each other for over a year following my move to Bremen in 1988. Meanwhile John was spending a year on study leave at the University of St Andrews in Scotland with Professor Ron Morrison and his persistent programming research group. From our conversations it was quite clear that John was having a most fruitful time in St Andrews and was gaining valuable new insights into the world of persistent programming. He was very keen to explore the significance of these insights for the MONADS Project which we had been jointly directing since the early 1980s. MONADS was not about persistent programming. In fact it had quite different origins in the areas of software engineering and information protection. In an earlier stage of the project our ideas on these themes had led us into the world of computer architecture and even hardware design in our attempts to provide an efficient base machine for our software ideas. The most important practical result of this phase of the project had been the development of the MONADS PC, a mini computer which would be better compared with say a Vax. Persistent Object Systems Malcolm Atkinson, David Maier, Veronique Benzaken, 2012-12-06 The Sixth International Workshop on Persistent Object Systems was held at Les Mazets des Roches near Tarascon, Provence in southern France from the fifth to the ninth of September 1994. The attractive context and autumn warmth greeted the 53 participants from 12 countries spread over five continents. Persistent object systems continue to grow in importance. Almost all significant uses of computers to support human endeavours depend on long lived and large scale systems. As expectations and ambitions rise so the sophistication of the systems we attempt to build also rises. The quality and integrity of the systems and their feasibility for supporting large groups of co-operating people depends on their technical foundation. Persistent object systems are being developed which provide a more robust and yet simpler foundation for these persistent applications. The workshop followed the tradition of the previous workshops in the series focusing on the design, implementation and use of persistent object systems in particular and persistent systems in general. There were clear signs that this line of research is maturing as engineering issues were discussed with the aid of evidence from operational systems. The work presented covered the complete range of database facilities: transactions, concurrency, distribution, integrity and schema modification. There were examples of very large scale use, one involving tens of terabytes of data. Language issues, particularly the provision of reflection, continued to be important. Detection of Intrusions and Malware, and Vulnerability Assessment Diego Zamboni, 2008-07 This book constitutes the refereed proceedings of the 5th International Conference on Detection of Intrusions and Malware and Vulnerability Assessment (DIMVA 2008) held in Paris, France in July 2008. The 13 revised full papers presented together with one extended abstract were carefully reviewed and selected from 42 submissions. The papers are organized in topical sections on attack prevention.
