Once upon a time, there lived a lion in a forest. One day after a heavy meal. It was sleeping under a tree. After a while, there came a mouse and it started to play on the lion. Suddenly the lion got up with anger and looked for those who disturbed its nice sleep. Then it saw a small mouse standing trembling with fear. The lion jumped on it and started to kill it. The mouse requested the lion to forgive it. The lion felt pity and left it. The mouse ran away. On another day, the lion was caught in a net by a hunter. The mouse came there and cut the net. Thus it escaped. Thereafter, the mouse and the lion became friends. They lived happily in the forest afterwards.

short seems to qualify without defining We cannot escape this inconvenience except by creating a new terminology a task far less profitable than the study of a considerable and much neglected literature Indeed Just what has constituted the short story in English is a question better answered at the end than at the beginning of such an investigation Nevertheless it is evident without further discussion that the writers who in many tongues and times have used a short narrative to convey their ideas are in one respect very often alike No matter what their subject matter may be morality indecency high imagination or human nature they have wished to procure a certain effect which could best be gained by a short story They have wished to turn a moral as in a fable or to bring home in a fabliau an amusing reflection upon life or to depict a situation as in the typical short story of to day and in every case a brief narrative with its one unified impression best served them It is the short narrative used for life units where only brevity and the consequent unified impression would serve that becomes the short story Is this definition sufficient Only a study of a given literature will show If it will work as the pragmatists say it is sufficient But in so working it is neither requisite nor possible that hard and fast lines of division should result Where to place many whitish yellow and yellowish white peoples is a problem for anthropologists Yet we call the very black man negro without hesitation Certain limitations however must be imposed at the outset Plots circulating through every tongue are often independent of strictly literary or cultural movements We however must concern ourselves primarily with written literature It is the history and development of an art which we follow an art by means of which all manner of familiar experiences can be put into form and made marketable Plots circulate in all ways Their history is matter for folk lore and psychology It is the short story as it appears in recorded English literature and the growth of its usefulness therein which is the subject of this volume Modern English Short Stories, 1939 The Great Modern English Stories, Edward Joseph O'Brien, 1919 Library of Congress Subject Headings Library of Congress.
