

Biology – Genetics & the Evolution of Life

Module 1

Lecture 1: Genetic variation and the genome

What is genetics?

- Genetics is the study of the variation b/w and among living things, and how this variation is inherited

Genome (0000)

- The complete genetic composition of cell or species
- The total amount of genetic material in a chromosome set
- The genetic material is DNA
- Sequencing a genome is working out the base sequence (adenine, thymine, cytosine and guanine) of the DNA
- Human have 2 genomes -> nuclear genome and the mitochondrial genome

Genotypes:

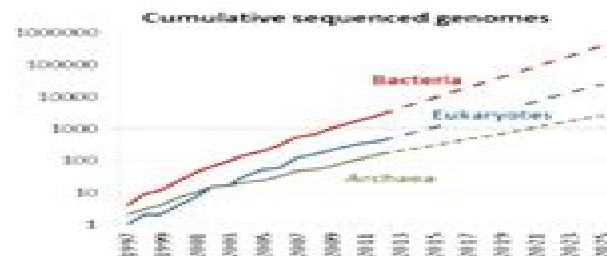

- Describe the genetic constitution of an organism. Comes from a parent if haploid or parents if diploid.

Phenotypes:

- Describe the morphological, biochemical and behavioral properties of an organism resulting from a specific genotype and its interaction with the environment.
 - o Affect what hormones & enzymes we produce
 - o Phenotypes are affected by genotypes and how those genes interact with the environment

Sequencing of Genome

The Human Genome draft published 2001

← Higher number of sequencing of genome does not relate to the level of complexity/intelligence of a species

What use is being made of this sequencing?

- Genome Wide Association Studies
- Involves rapidly scanning markers across the complete sets of DNA, or genomes, of many people to find genetic variations associated with a particular disease.
- Such studies are particularly useful in finding genetic variations that contribute to common, complex diseases, such as cancer, diabetes, heart disease and mental illness
